Industrial foundation shutting down

■ Board votes to dissolve, give all of its assets to Northwest Kentucky Forward organization

Following a half-century that saw it help transform Henderson into an industrial center with thousands of factory jobs, the Henderson County Industrial Foundation is closing up shop.

The foundation board voted Wednesday to dissolve the organization and transfer its assets — some $150,000 in possible industrial land and cash — to the Northwest Kentucky Forward regional economic development organization for use in bringing jobs to Henderson County.

“It’s just that it was not enough to do a whole lot,” foundation Chairman Bruce Woodring said Thursday. “So we’re going to give our assets to them; they have a full-time person” to recruit industry.

In fact, NWKF President and CEO Kevin Sheilley is leaving the organization at the end of November to take an economic development position in Ocala, Fla.; the organization’s board said it will start a search for his successor next week.

“I’m sure they’ll get a good replacement,” Woodring said.

The real estate being transferred includes 27 acres off Kentucky 136-West near the Henderson City-County Airport that Woodring and longtime foundation President C.B. West said would be suitable for small industrial sites, perhaps for an airplane-related company or hangars.

The property, located adjacent to the privately owned Amiet Industrial Park, is part of a 45-acre site that the industrial foundation purchased a few years ago from American Electric Power because the airport needed land for a runway extension that could accommodate corporate jets, including those used by executives of existing or prospective industries.

The foundation will also turn over approximately $47,000 in cash to NWKF.

The industrial foundation was established in 1960, when there was no full-time economic development agency to recruit factories and when average wages here were well below the state average.

“The industrial foundation did it for a number of years,” West said. “It was

If Kelsey Garrison can make it, she's going to head out to Garvin Park in Evansville on Saturday.

That's where she'll join almost 270 others who, as of Wednesday, were scheduled to walk at 10 a.m. as part of the inaugural 2012 Evansville CureSearch for Children's Cancer Walk.

The event's already raised more than $20,000 toward pediatric cancer research, including the type of cancer that Garrison, 13, is fighting right now.

Child cancer patient Lane Goodwin died Wednesday night. An obituary appears on 2A.

“She’s actually in very high spirits,” her mother, Mary Veach, said on Thursday. “But she went through the down portion (when she was first diagnosed.)”

That terrifying news came on Dec. 14, 2011, just six days after the Henderson resident's birthday.

Kelsey had been taken to the emergency room for a backache, and that's when she learned she had

‘Snowbirds’ roost here temporarily

■ Canadian aerobatic team stops for fuel

There was likely an “O Canada” moment at the Henderson City-County Airport on Tuesday.

That's because nine jets that are part of the Canadian Air Force “Snowbirds” aerobatic team refueled at the local airport that day in an unannounced visit that brought in more than $10,000 in sales.

“This team is the equivalent to the Thunderbirds

(and the Blue Angels,” said Steve Parker, a member of the Kentucky Aviation Association. “I’ve seen them many times and they are awesome!”

According to the local airport's website, the Snowbirds Demonstration Team is a Canadian icon comprised of serving members of the Canadian Forces.

The Snowbirds were in Henderson because their season was over, and they were on their way home to Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

“They stopped in Henderson to refuel,” the website said. “Fortunately, we had enough ramp space and new, full, high-speed

Student battles odds working toward master's

If there's one thing that Kim Morris knows quite well, it's that there are many paths to success. Unfortunately, not all of them are pleasant.

There was, first of all, the blood clot she suffered days after her daughter, Shaylee, was born 14 years ago.

Morris recovered but was then diagnosed with multiple sclerosis, which she continues to battle to this day.

Recently, her mother passed away after a serious illness.

Still, the 43-year-old persevered, and this May, she's scheduled to graduate from Murray State University's Henderson Regional Campus (on the campus of Henderson Community College) with a master's in human development and leadership.

That's after she returned to school as a non-traditional student at age 37 to complete her associate degree. In 2009, she obtained her bachelor's degree from MSU while working there as well.

Being a single mother who is simultaneously going to school and struggling with health issues means she can only work part time at the local Murray State office. But it's also given Morris a unique perspective — one that she's quick to share with those who might face their own challenges, too.

“We certainly do not get to pick and choose the paths that we have to take,” Morris said. “However, it is up to us to make the best of the situations that we have. I feel that for each and every one of us, there is a purpose, and we are all able to contribute and make a difference if we want to.”

Morris certainly wants to, and if she could choose her perfect job after graduation, it would be to advise college students about

TASTE OF HOMEMAKERS

The sixth-annual Taste of Homemakers event has been set for Nov. 10 at the Henderson County Extension Service Education and Expo Center. The event, which runs from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., is sponsored by the Henderson County Extension Homemakers and is open to the public. Homemakers will be offering samples of recipes as well as showcasing crafts taught through the Extension Service. One free cookbook per attendee will be available. Admission is free, but donations of nonperishable items for local food pantries will be accepted.

FOUNDATION FUNDRAISER

An event called “Silver Soiree” is being planned for Nov. 3 as a fundraiser for the Methodist Hospital Foundation. It will take place from 7 to 11 p.m. Nov. 3 at Audubon Museum, and will feature music by Skip Bond and the Fugitives, food by Avrice Watson, a silent auction, a cash bar and valet parking. Tickets are $75 per person. Tickets are available by calling 831-7835 or they can be purchased online at www.methodisthospital.net.

Audubon Metals named 2012 Industry of the Year

Many Hendersonians are unaware that an industry called Audubon Metals LLC operates here at all.

If they do happen to catch a glimpse of its plant located just off U.S. 60-West, they might see it only as a big building with “little mountains of scrap metal,” according to Steve Rapagnani.

In fact, “It’s probably one of the greenest companies around,” said Rapagnani, vice president of operations for the nearby Gibbs Die Casting Corp.

Audubon Metals is also a growing company that, with 195 employees, is one of the largest industrial employers here, according to the Kentucky Cabinet for Economic Development, and the plant and

Deaths

Reverend John Thomas Dunaway, Ph.D., dies at 79

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. – The Rev. John Thomas Dunaway, 79, passed away Wednesday, Oct. 17, 2012, peacefully at his home in Huntsville after a long illness.

He is survived by his wife of 59 years, Mary Jayne Cutter Dunaway; his daughter, Susan Dunaway of Shelbyville, Ky.; his son, Mark Dunaway, and his daughter-in-law, Angela Phillips Dunaway, and his grandchildren, Jonathon and Kristen Dunaway, all of Huntsville.

John was born in Stanford, Ky., to John and Rachel Raye Dunaway on Nov. 25, 1932. After surviving numerous life-threatening illnesses and accidents, his mother claimed that God had big plans for her son’s life. God did indeed.

He graduated from Georgetown College in 1954, received his master’s degree from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1958, and after receiving various honorary doctorates, he received his Ph.D. from the Lexington Theological Seminary in 1983.

As a minister, John Dunaway pastored Little Flock Baptist Church in Shepherdsville, Eaton Memorial Baptist Church in Owensboro, First Baptist Church in Corbin Ky., and helped found Community Baptist Church in Henderson.

He served as president of the Kentucky Baptist Convention, chaired the board of the Kentucky Baptist Children’s Home. He served as chairman of the executive board of the Southern Baptist Convention for many years. During troubled times, he prevented a split in the Southern Baptist Convention by working to form a moderate group within the denomination which he named the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship. He served as moderator of the Kentucky Baptist Fellowship and on their Ethics Committee. He later helped to found the Baptist Seminary of Kentucky now located on the campus of Georgetown College. He also served as professor of Biblical studies for the Newberg Seminary of Indiana.

He was awarded the Commander’s Award for Public Service from the Department of the Army. In his civic life, he served as president of the Corbin Rotary Club and of the Henderson Rotary Club. He was awarded the Rotary honor of Service Above Self award. He was also proud of the Baptist housing facility for the elderly and handicapped in Corbin that bears his name.

After retiring from the ministry, John Dunaway proudly served on the board and later as executive director of the Sandefur Center, as chaplain and executive director of St. Anthony’s Hospice, and as executive director of the Humane Society of Henderson County. After working tirelessly for the election of his dear friend, Steven L. Beshear, to the office of governor of the commonwealth of Kentucky, John went to work on a shared interest of theirs for the University of Kentucky’s Center of Applied Energy as a project manager for western Kentucky. He expanded his efforts by encouraging students into jobs relating to coal and developing green energy fields. The Patriot Coal Corp. honored his work by naming certain coal reserves in Henderson County as the Dunaway Mine Complex.

Services will be at 11 a.m. CDT Saturday at First Baptist Church of Huntsville. There will be a celebration of his life at 2 p.m. EDT Nov. 3 at First Baptist Church in Corbin. Friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. CDT today at First Baptist Church of Huntsville.

Expressions of sympathy may take the form of contributions to the Baptist Seminary of Kentucky, 400 E. College St., Box 358, Georgetown, KY 40324.

Laughlin Service Funeral Home in Huntsville is in charge of arrangements.

Lane Goodwin

CALHOUN– Lane Goodwin, 13, Calhoun, died Wednesday, Oct. 17, 2012, at his home.

Lane William Goodwin was born May 2, 1999, in Henderson to George Merrill and Angela Lee Watkins Goodwin. He was a student at McLean County Middle School and a member of Calhoun Baptist Church. Lane had a beautiful smile, was full of energy, loved sharks, fishing, adventures and spending time with both his family and friends, especially his brother, Landen. Lane has united many from across the world through “Thumbs Up for Lane,” bringing awareness to and finding a cure for childhood cancer.

Lane was preceded in death by his great-grandparents, Claude Watkins and Frances and Haldon Goodwin.

Suits target mountaintop mining

■ Environmental groups want to stop permits at two facilities

By Dylan Lovan
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — The Sierra Club along with environmental groups in Kentucky and West Virginia are attempting to block permitting at two mountaintop surface mines, alleging in federal lawsuits that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers did not consider potential health impacts on residents.

The lawsuits are the latest effort by activists in central Appalachia to fight the controversial mining method known as mountaintop removal, which uses blasting and heavy equipment to peel away layers of earth and rock and dumping them into valleys. Environmentalists say the dumping introduces harmful substances, like mercury and selenium, into waterways.

The suits filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court seek to block federal permits required under the Clean Water Act for a mine in southeastern Kentucky and another in Boone County, W.Va. The groups say the permits would allow the mining companies to destroy miles of streams by dumping earth and rock removed from the mining sites.

The Kentucky suit is challenging a permit issued in July that allows Leeco Inc. to dump fill material in about three miles of streams from the Stacy Branch mine along the Perry and Knott County border. Leeco is a subsidiary of James River Coal of Richmond, Va. A spokeswoman for the company did not return a request for comment Thursday. In West Virginia, Raven Crest Contracting received a permit in August that allows it to dump at the Boone mine near the community of Peytona. No one answered the phone at a number for Raven Crest in Costa, West Va., on Thursday afternoon.

The environmental groups allege the Corps granted the permits despite the “growing body of scientific evidence indicating significant public health impacts from surface coal mining,” the suit said. They allege the Corps “did not perform any human health analysis or reach any human health conclusions” in the permit process, as required by federal law.

A message left for the Corps of Engineers Public Affairs office in Washington was not immediately returned on Thursday.

“This mine is going to ruin our neighborhood,” Pam Maggard, a resident of Sassafras, Ky., said in a statement from Kentuckians for the Commonwealth. “Once again no one will be able to enjoy being outside on their porches and in their yards because of all the dust and mud.”

Kentuckians for the Commonwealth, along with the Sierra Club, filed the suit in Kentucky. The Ohio Valley Environmental Coalition, the Highlands Conservancy and Coal River Mountain Watch were named as plaintiffs in the West Virginia complaint.

South plays host to robotics competition

Gleaner staff

The Tri-State VEX SACK Attack Robotics 2012 Competition will be held at South Middle School on Nov. 17, and eligible middle and high school teams are invited to enter the competition for free.

Roughly 24 teams will participate in the contest that will draw VEX teams from surrounding states. During the competition, teams will test the ability of their robots to lift as many half-pound bean bags as possible into a trough in an allotted time.

The program allows students to learn about careers in science, technology, engineering and math.

The VEX team from Henderson County High School will compete under the direction of Stuart Jones, a machine tool and technology teacher, and Donna Waggener, a science teacher at South Middle School. The high school team will be made up of 13 students who are interested in learning how to program and build competitive robots. The team meets twice a week during the school year.

“All VEX competitions are fun and exciting,” Waggener said. “Teams help (other) teams with all types of troubleshooting. It truly is a partnership among competitors.”

Teams that advance in the Tri-State VEX SACK Attack Robotics 2012 Competition will have an opportunity to compete at the World Championship in Anaheim, Calif., in April 2013. Teams from all over the world will be represented in Anaheim.

Meanwhile, the event will be underwritten by the Robotics Education and Competition Foundation.

The foundation exists because it connects students, mentors and schools in every community to a variety of successful and engaging technology-based programs.

Its goal is to provide programs with services, solutions and a community that allows them to flourish in a way that fosters the technical and interpersonal skills necessary for students to succeed in the 21st century.

Area code meeting draws three

The Associated Press

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. — A meeting about a new area code for western Kentucky drew an audience that could have nearly fit into a phone booth.

The Kentucky New Era reports three people attended the Wednesday evening meeting at Hopkinsville Community College.

Kentucky Public Service Commission spokesman Andrew Melnykovich said the meeting was held to explain the reasons behind a new area code and to go over options for adding a new one.

The Hopkinsville session was the first in a series of public meetings in western Kentucky to discuss the issue with residents.

HCC showing free Halloween movies

The public is invited to a free Halloween double feature movie night on Oct. 26 from 6:30 to 11 p.m. at Henderson Community College.

The movies will be “Dragonfly,” a PG-13 film featuring Kevin Costner as a doctor distraught over the death of his wife, and “The Devil’s Backbone,” rated R. It’s set at a school during the last days of the Spanish Civil War, and it includes hidden riches, intrigue and the restless ghost of a murdered student.

They will be shown in Joe’s Place, located in the Student Center.

Snacks will be sold and proceeds will go toward the purchase of a basketball goal.

The event is organized by the college’s Student Engagement group.

U.S. 60-East thefts under investigation

The Henderson County Sheriff’s Office is asking for the public’s help in solving several thefts in two neighborhoods along U.S. 60-East in the last few days.

Detective John Book said power tools and hand tools were reported stolen from unlocked, parked vehicles and construction areas in Pleasant View and the Country Club area, and that most of the thefts occurred late at night or very early in the morning.

“We are just asking if any neighbors saw anything,” he added.

The sheriff’s office may be reached at 826-2713.

Corn hole tourney set at learning center

Up for a game of corn hole?

The Thelma B. Johnson Early Learning Center Family Resource Center will host a corn hole tournament on Nov. 3 at 11 a.m. to raise money for the Future Stars program.

All proceeds from the event will help provide resources for preschool children who need school supplies, food, clothes and more.

Community teams (two people per team) can still register with an entry fee of $30 per team.

The event will take place at the Thelma B.

Corvette plant idling production

LOUISVILLE — General Motors plans to idle Corvette production in Kentucky for six months to prepare for the next generation of the iconic sports car.

The automaker laid out its schedule Thursday for revamping its assembly plant in Bowling Green for the all-new 2014 model.

Production will halt sometime in February to make way for retooling, renovating the body shop and retraining employees, GM spokesman Monte Doran said in a telephone interview.

Production on the next model will begin in the third quarter of 2013, he said.

GM has retooled plants before while continuing production, but that wasn’t feasible at the Corvette plant, he said.

Malala, at 14, offers lesson in raw courage

We are humbled by the courage of a child. Fourteen-year-old Malala Yousafzai was shot in the head by members of the Taliban last week in Mingora, Pakistan. According to the radicals, she was “using her tongue and pen against Islam and Muslims, so she was punished for her crime by the blessing of the almighty Allah.” By their measure, perhaps. But to put our response in simple Southern parlance: That’s a crock. Her “crime” was to advocate for a girl’s right to attend school. And it was as she was leaving her school, the Khushal girls’ high school and college, along with more than a dozen of her classmates, that members of the Pakistani Taliban fired into its bus. Malala was severely injured. Two schoolmates were hurt, but their injuries were less serious and they are recovering at home.

Malala was evaluated by two British doctors, one a Pakistan native, who were visiting in the area and, after taking steps to protect her, ensured she was airlifted to England where she was hospitalized. She is reported to be improving, although she faces long-term rehabilitation, according to The Washington Post. That is, of course, dependent upon her continued protection, already extensive, while in the hospital. According to a later report from the Post, British police are investigating a security alert at the hospital. Attention to security is vital. The Taliban, as is typical of cowards and fools, pledged to continue to target her. It is dangerous to tangle with fanatics. Yet this child stood up for her beliefs, not because she was unafraid but despite her fear. While she seems after this display of bravery to be older than her years, she is still a child who has been thrown much too soon into an adult world. Children are injured or even die in our country every day. Tragedy and sadness aren’t limited to nations we think of as war-torn and dangerous. But more often than not, that harm is from our own failures as a society and as adults who are supposed to keep children safe, not because they have spoken out against wrong. This will not be the last attack from groups that try to assign noble intentions behind ignoble causes. But it should serve to remind us all that whatever our worries here, they are dwarfed by life in a land where even day-to-day life is not just a struggle, but dangerous beyond our comprehension. Malala Yousafzai’s voice will not be stilled. Neither should our own. The next time you are called upon to speak out against wrong but hesitate for fear of criticism, remember her.

An explanation for the undecided during the primary season) trying to move to the middle in the general election. The choice is pretty simple. If you want less government and presumably lower taxes, vote for Romney. If you believe government is the only way to properly educate and provide health care for the majority of people and to protect the environment and civil rights, vote to reelect the president. Would-be voters who pay attention to the candidates’ positions on public policy couldn’t possibly be on the fence three weeks from the election. No debate, short of a massive misstatement, should change anyone’s position. Frank Newport, editor-in-chief of the Gallup Poll, described the average undecided voter in a radio interview this week. He said that person is usually white and middle-aged. He said members of minority groups are much more likely to decide well in advance on the candidate they plan to support. Young voters and older voters also decide ahead of time. That still doesn’t explain to my satisfaction why this particular group is less tethered to a particular candidate this close to Election Day. Tuesday night’s debate was widely seen as a draw, unlikely to change the minds of last-minute undecideds. But the first presidential debate sure did a striking job of drawing people into the Romney camp. Before that debate, the president had surged ahead of Romney in national and battleground-state polls, by a comfortable margin of 5 points or more. Just before Tuesday night’s debate, the candidates were neck and neck. “Obama leads in states with 201 electoral votes, according to state polling averages compiled by the RealClearPolitics website,” USA Today reported on Sunday. “Romney leads in states with 191 electoral votes. It takes 270 electoral votes to win the presidency. Two-and-half weeks ago, RealClearPolitics gave Obama a lead of 265-191 in the Electoral College, in part because Ohio was considered a ‘likely Obama’ state. Now Ohio is again a tossup.” I’ve only seen one comment from an undecided voter that could possibly explain why people remain undecided this late in the race. One woman said she was undecided because she was not happy with either candidate. That explanation rings true. Each candidate this year is fabulously flawed, even from the perspective of voters who should be stalwart supporters of one or the other. So this will be yet another “hold your nose and vote for so-and-so” election, just like all but one election has been for me since I came of voting age. How sad. But it does help explain why millions of Americans have not yet made up their minds.

So, these words can be irritating?

ages — the 1 percent, the people living the life of Riley, the 99 percent, the people who would like to be living the life of Riley but can’t afford it, and the 47 percent who are apparently incorrigible moochers who irritate the likes of Riley. To my mind, a flirtation with fractions is no way to embellish a colorful language. Politics is responsible for another expression that has lately come to the attention of my ears. (My ears often stand at attention for new expressions and whenever they hear the national anthem.) I speak of “Wow!” This is not a new word, of course, but the context in which I heard it was new. Not unusually, a candidate for public office was speaking nonsense on a visit here to the word factory and, if I say so myself,

I made a pithy and commonsensical observation about his views, something like, “But if Social Security fails, the beneficiaries can’t be expected to get jobs as stevedores to support themselves in their old age.” That is when the candidate said, “Wow!” in the sense of standing in awe, bereft of all other words in the shadow of my towering ignorance. This “wow” was an indictment and summary of my grand and obvious folly. So impressive was this linguistic judo trick, I now intend to say “Wow!” at home next time it rains and my wife asks me to take the garbage out. When I say “Wow!” she will know how silly her suggestion is and how laziness must not be disturbed by unreasonable demands. I may add the ironic term “Really?” for emphasis. Everywhere you go now, Americans are responding to questions or situations by saying “Really?” as if the word came naturally dripping with contempt. It is really maddening.

A colleague says this is part of the shtick of Seth Meyers of “Saturday Night Live.” He has a lot to answer for. Really. On the plus side, am I right in thinking that the ubiquitous use of the word “like” is in retreat among teenagers, if ever so slightly? “Like” used to infest youthful speech, settling on their sentences like stink bugs on a wall. Now I increasingly hear younger people answer questions by saying “So ...” before they explain anything. I suspect they need a settling word, a mental pause so their minds can stop multi-tasking on social media to answer a question, and “so” is it. And so on. This is not ungrammatical or even new. As Mr. Webster’s dictionary explains, “As a conjunction, so is sometimes used colloquially as a superfluous element connecting clauses or to preface or resume one’s remarks.” Call me a so-and-so for pointing this tic out, but the constant use of “so” — wow! — is also irritating. Really.

Sandusky asks judge to overturn convictions

By Genaro C. Armas
and Mark Scoloro
Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. — Former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky asked a judge Thursday to overturn his child sexual abuse convictions and grant him a new trial, claiming his lawyers lacked sufficient time to prepare and the statute of limitations for some charges had expired.

Sandusky's lawyers filed the appeal at the courthouse in Bellefonte where he was sentenced two weeks ago to 30 to 60 years in prison after being convicted of abusing 10 boys, some on Penn State's campus in State College. They say there wasn't enough evidence to support convictions.

A spokesman for the attorney general's office said the Sandusky filing was under review.

Sandusky remains in the county jail, awaiting a transfer to a state prison to serve time for 45 criminal counts.

Eight young men testified against him in June, describing a range of abuse they said included fondling and oral and anal sex when they were boys.

Sandusky didn't testify at his trial but has consistently maintained his innocence, and his attorneys have repeatedly said they felt they were rushed to trial and swamped by a mountain of documents prosecutors turned over in the seven-plus months between his arrest in November and the June trial.

Man's alleged plot to bomb Fed is at odds with image

NEW YORK — Quazi Mohammad Rezwanul Ahsan Nafis was a terrible student in his native Bangladesh, and his middle-class parents say he persuaded them to send him off to study in the U.S. as a way of improving his job prospects.

At the Missouri college where he enrolled, one classmate said Nafis often remarked that true Muslims don't believe in violence — an image that seemed startlingly at odds with Nafis' arrest in an FBI sting this week on charges of trying to blow up the Federal Reserve Bank in New York with what he thought was a 1,000-pound car bomb.

"I can't imagine being more shocked about somebody doing something like this," said Jim Dow, a 54-year-old Army veteran who rode home from class with Nafis twice a week. "I didn't just meet this kid a couple of times. We talked quite a bit, sir. And this doesn't seem to be in character."

Federal investigators, often accused by defense attorneys of entrapping and leading would-be terrorists along, said the 21-year-old Nafis made the first move over the summer, reaching out for accomplices and eventually contacting a government informant, who then went to federal authorities.

They said he also selected his target, drove the van loaded with dummy explosives up to the door of the bank, and tried to set off the bomb from a hotel room using a cellphone he thought had been rigged as a detonator.

During the investigation, he and the informant corresponded via Facebook and other social media, talked on the phone and met in hotel rooms, according to a law enforcement official who was not authorized to speak publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Nafis spoke of his admiration for Osama bin Laden, talked of writing an article about his plot for an al-Qaida-affiliated magazine, and said he would be willing to be a martyr, but preferred to go home to his family after carrying out the attack, authorities said.

He also talked about wanting to kill President Barack Obama and bomb the New York Stock Exchange, a law enforcement official said.

Average debt up for college grads

It's the latest snapshot of the growing burden of student debt and it's another discouraging one: Two-thirds of the national college class of 2011 finished school with loan debt, and those who borrowed walked off the graduation stage owing on average $26,600 — up about 5 percent from the class before.

The latest figures are calculated in a report out Thursday by the California-based Institute for College Access and Success and likely underestimate the problem in some ways because they don't include most graduates of for-profit colleges, who typically borrow more than their counterparts elsewhere.

Still, while 2011 college graduates faced an unemployment rate of 8.8 percent in 2011, even those with debt remained better off than those without a degree. The report emphasized research showing that the economic returns on college degrees remain, in general, strong.

MINNESOTA

Man convicted of aiding terror group

MINNEAPOLIS — A Minneapolis man has been convicted of helping send young men to Somalia to join the al-Qaida-linked terrorist group al-Shabab.

The federal jury Thursday convicted 46-year-old Mahamud Said Omar on all five counts he faced. He could be sentenced to up to life in prison.

Omar was the first person to stand trial in the government's investigation into what it says was the recruiting of more than 20 men who left Minnesota for Somalia to join al-Shabab, a U.S.-designated terrorist group blamed for much of the violence in the East African country.

Prosecutors say Omar helped young men from Minnesota's large Somali community buy plane tickets to Somalia and buy weapons once they arrived.

MISSISSIPPI

Overnight storms swat Southeast

JACKSON — A line of severe storms packing strong winds and possible tornadoes swept across the Southeast overnight, injuring seven people in Mississippi, downing power lines and trees, and damaging homes around the region, authorities said early Thursday.

Nearly 900 customers lost electricity in Arkansas, where some buildings were damaged but no injuries were reported. Storms also raked western Tennessee, toppling trees in a mobile home park north of Memphis and forcing some residents out of their homes. No injuries were reported.

Mobile homes were also damaged in northern Mississippi's Union County.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Experts unsure of East's winter

WASHINGTON — Federal meteorologists are forecasting a milder and drier winter for much of the western United States, but say they are stumped about what will happen in the East.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration on Thursday predicted a warm winter for west of the Mississippi River with a cooler patch for Hawaii and the Florida peninsula.

Officials forecast a drier than normal winter for a region from the Pacific Northwest to Nevada, as well as Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and northern Missouri.

Abortion clinic opens to protests

BELFAST — The first abortion clinic on the island of Ireland opened Thursday in downtown Belfast, unleashing angry protests on the street and uniting Catholic and Protestant politicians in calls to investigate the new facility.

The clinic, run by the British family planning charity Marie Stopes, will be permitted to provide abortions only in exceptional circumstances to women less than nine weeks pregnant.

But the opening caught Northern Ireland's socially conservative politicians off guard, and they vowed to launch an investigation into how the clinic operates.

YEMEN

At least 7 militants killed in drone raids

SANAA — Suspected U.S. drone strikes killed at least seven al-Qaida-linked militants in southern Yemen on Thursday, Yemeni security officials and witnesses said.

The officials say at least three strikes targeted a gathering of militants at a farm outside the town of Jaar, a one-time al-Qaida stronghold.

The officials say the attacks followed tips of an imminent al-Qaida attack on the town.

Residents of the area who came to the site after the attack said they saw vehicles burning, as thick black smoke billowed into the sky and explosions rocked the areas.

They declined to be identified, fearing reprisals.

Government forces deployed to the area and the number of the dead could rise since body parts were found but not counted, the officials said.

PAKISTAN

Officials say militant detained, released

KHAR — One of the two Taliban militants suspected of attacking a teenage girl activist was detained by the Pakistani military in 2009 but subsequently released, intelligence officials said Thursday.

Malala Yousufzai, 14, was shot and critically wounded Oct. 9 as she headed home from school in the northwest Swat Valley. The Taliban said they targeted Malala, a fierce advocate for girls' education, because she promoted "Western thinking" and was critical of the militant group.

IRAQ

Central bank chief faces arrest warrant

BAGHDAD — Iraqi authorities have issued arrest warrants for the longtime governor of the central bank following allegations of financial wrongdoing, the country's judiciary said Thursday.

Allegations against Sinan al-Shabibi, who has led the bank since 2003, surfaced earlier this week while he was out of the country on official business.

The charges are seen by the government's critics as an attempt to sideline the politically independent economist, and have been blasted as politically motivated by al-Shabibi's defense team.

Supreme Judicial Council spokesman Abdul-Sattar Bayrkdar told The Associated Press that 15 bank officials are being sought along with al-Shabibi.

U.S. sees potential of latest uprising against Taliban

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

AB BAND, Afghanistan — Fed up with the Taliban closing their schools and committing other acts of oppression, men in a village about 100 miles south of Kabul took up arms late last spring and chased out the insurgents with no help from the Afghan government or U.S. military.

Small-scale revolts in recent months like the one in Kunsaf, mostly along a stretch of desert south of the Afghan capital, indicate bits of a grass-roots, do-it-yourself anti-insurgency that the U.S. hopes Afghan authorities can transform into a wider movement. Perhaps it can undercut the Taliban in areas they still dominate after 11 years of war with the United States and NATO allies.

The effort in Ghazni

Province looks like a long shot. The villagers don't readily embrace any outside authority, be it the Taliban, the U.S. or the Afghan government.

American officials nonetheless are quietly nurturing the trend, hoping it might become a game changer, or at least a new roadblock for the Taliban. At the same time, they are adamant that if anyone can convince the villagers to side with the Afghan government, it's the Afghans — not the Americans.

"If we went out there and talked to them we would taint these groups and it would backfire," said Army Brig. Gen. John Charlton, the senior American adviser to the Afghan military in provinces along the southern approaches to Kabul.

Charlton, who witnessed similar stirrings in Iraq while serving as a commander there in 2007, said in some cases the Taliban are fighting back fiercely, killing leaders of the armed uprisings.

In Kunsaf, for example, the Taliban killed several village fighters in skirmishes as recently as last month, but the Taliban suffered heavy losses and have thus far failed to retake the village.

The American general visited two military bases in the area last week, one in Ghazni's Ab Band district that was vacated by an Army brigade as part of September's U.S. troop drawdown, and the other in nearby Gelan district, where Afghan paramilitary police forces are moving in to fill the gap left by the Americans.

Charlton said the U.S. and its coalition partners are taking a behind-the-scenes role.

Airstrikes on rebels in Syria kill at least 43

By Ben Hubbard
Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syrian warplanes hammered a strategic city captured by rebels, leaving behind scenes of carnage captured Thursday on amateur videos that showed a man holding up two child-sized legs not connected to a body and another carrying a dismembered arm.

Activists said airstrikes during the past two days on opposition targets across Syria's north have killed at least 43 people.

The city of Maaret al-Numan, located strategically on a major north-south highway connecting Aleppo and Damascus, was captured by rebels last week and there has been heavy fighting around it since. Rebel brigades from the surrounding area have poured in to defend the town. Online videos have shown them firing mortars at regime troops, and they claimed to have shot down a government helicopter Wednesday.

Since it was captured a week ago, the city in northern Idlib province and its surroundings have been the focus of one of the heaviest air bombardments since President Bashar Assad's military first unleashed its air force against rebels during the summer.

Local activists in the city say warplanes are continuously overhead, and entire villages are largely deserted and peppered with destroyed homes.

The scenes from the city provide a window into the carnage being wrought by the Syrian military's increasing reliance on airstrikes to fight rebels waging a civil war to topple Assad.

Marijuana use up, tobacco use down among teens

By Sharyn Jackson and Warren Wolfe

Minneapolis Star Tribune

It's late Saturday night. A group of friends order a pizza and gather on a screened porch to light up. It isn't tobacco.

They use a bubbler, a pipe with a water chamber, which is supposed to make the effects of the marijuana last longer.

These friends are not isolated cases. A May 2012 study by the Partnership at Drugfree.org found that 27 percent of teenagers nationwide said they used marijuana within the previous month, a 42 percent increase from 2008. Nine percent of teens said they used marijuana 20 or more times the previous month, up 80 percent.

This sharp rise comes at a time when tobacco use among teens is waning. "It's consistent with the whole social disapproval of cigarette smoking," said Sean Clarkin, director of programs at the Partnership, formerly the Partnership for Drug-Free America, which works to support families of children who use drugs. "Smoking has become less cool because people know it can hurt other individuals. But marijuana is more normalized. It's just part of many kids' everyday existence."

Parents — often former pot smokers themselves — are sometimes challenged by children who maintain that marijuana is safer and less noxious than tobacco or alcohol, let alone stronger drugs like cocaine, heroin or methamphetamine.

Some teenagers, and even some parents, don't want to talk about the risks of respiratory and brain damage, never mind addiction, said Dr. Joseph Lee, medical director for Hazelden youth services. New research has found IQ reductions among teens that use marijuana 20 or more times a month, he said.

"The issue is not whether marijuana is better or worse than cigarettes or alcohol or some other drug," he said. "That's a little like asking, 'Which cancer is the best one to have?' How about choosing no cancer?"

The relationship between marijuana smoking and lung cancer is hotly debated, with opinions running the gamut from claims of a direct link to arguments that marijuana use actually can retard lung cancer.

"Marijuana smoke contains 50 to 70 percent more carcinogenic hydrocarbons than tobacco smoke," according to the National Institute on Drug Abuse website. "Marijuana users usually inhale more deeply and hold their breath longer than tobacco smokers do, which further increases the lungs' exposure to carcinogenic smoke."

On the other hand, Harvard University researchers found that in mice with lung cancer, exposure to the main active ingredient in pot — delta-tetrahydrocannabinol, commonly referred to as THC — reduced tumor growth by 50 percent. Researchers at UCLA concluded that research about marijuana use and cancer in humans was inconsistent at this point.

That doesn't mean there are no lung-related health risks. Yale University researchers compared data from several studies on the effects of marijuana and tobacco smoking, and discovered an "increased risk of many of the same respiratory problems," including shortness of breath, wheezing and chronic bronchitis.

Multivitamins may cut cancer risk in men

By Marilybn Marchione

Associated Press

America's favorite dietary supplements, multivitamins, modestly lowered the risk for cancer in healthy male doctors who took them for more than a decade, the first large study to test these pills has found.

The result is a surprise because many studies of individual vitamins have found they don't help prevent chronic diseases and some even seemed to raise the risk of cancer.

In the new study, multivitamins cut the chance of developing cancer by 8 percent. That is less effective than a good diet, exercise and not smoking, each of which can lower cancer risk by 20 percent to 30 percent, cancer experts say.

Multivitamins also may have different results in women, younger men or people less healthy than those in this study.

"It's a very mild effect and personally I'm not sure it's significant enough to recommend to anyone" although it is promising, said Dr. Ernest Hawk, vice president of cancer prevention at the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center and formerly of the National Cancer Institute.

About one-third of U.S.

America's favorite dietary supplements, multivitamins, modestly lowered the risk of developing cancer in healthy male doctors who took them daily for more than a decade, the first large study to test these pills has found. The study was published online in the Journal of the American Medical Association on Wednesday.

adults and as many as half of those over 50 take multivitamins. They are marketed as a kind of insurance policy against bad eating. Yet no government agency recommends their routine use "regardless of the quality of a person's diet," says a fact sheet from the federal Office of Dietary Supplements.

Some fads, such as the antioxidant craze over vitamins A and E and beta-carotene, backfired when studies found more health risk with those supplements, not less. Many of those were single vitamins in larger doses than the "100 percent of daily value" amounts that multivitamins typically contain.

Science on vitamins has been skimpy. Most studies have been observational — they look at groups of people who do and do not use vitamins, a method that can't give firm conclusions.

Dr. J. Michael Gaziano, of Brigham and Women's Hospital and VA Boston, led a stronger test. Nearly 15,000 male doctors who were 50 or older and free of cancer when the study started were given monthly packets of Centrum Silver or fake multivitamins without knowing which type they received.

After about 11 years, there were 2,669 new cancers, and some people had cancer more than once. For every 1,000 men per year in the study, there were 17 cancers among multivitamin users and more than 18 among those taking the placebo pills. That worked out to an 8 percent lower risk of developing cancer in the vitamin group.

Researchers still trying to define concussions

By Lee Bowman

Scripps Howard News Service

For all the attention being paid to concussions in sports these days, from young amateurs to burly pros, researchers are still trying to narrow down just how to define the brain injury.

Brain experts know that concussion can affect sleep, memory or thinking skills and mood, and produce physical symptoms like headache, vision problems, dizziness, nausea and feeling tired. Any or all of these can occur after a head trauma, sometimes right away, often not for days.

Some recent studies indicate that young athletes tend to focus on the physical signs, while downplaying other effects, and that it may be necessary to set up some type of scale to evaluate the severity of concussions.

The "knock-out" concussion in which someone loses consciousness may be easy enough to spot, but many sports concussion injuries don't result in loss of consciousness.

"The term 'concussion' means different things to different people, and it's not yet clear that the signs and symptoms we now use to make a diagnosis will ultimately prove to be the most important piece of this complicated puzzle," Dr. Ann-Christine Duhaime, director of the Pediatric Brain Trauma Lab at Massachusetts General Hospital, said in a statement about a study of 450 student-athletes she recently led.

The study, published in the Oct 2. Journal of Neurosurgery, was part of a five-year investigation into the biomechanics of concussion. It involved students at Brown University, Dartmouth College and Virginia Tech, who were members of the football team at all three schools, or women's and men's ice hockey teams at the two northern schools. Each player wore helmets equipped with instruments that measured the frequency, magnitude and location of head impacts during practices, scrimmages and games.

The helmets recorded more than 486,000 head impacts. Researchers noted that while more severe impacts were seen in most athletes with concussions, some concussions were also detected after relatively mild hits.

Concussions were diagnosed in 44 athletes, including four diagnosed a second time. In 31 instances, a concussion could be tied to a specific impact. Athletes most frequently reported symptoms of mental cloudiness, headache and dizziness, and only one lost consciousness. But immediate diagnosis of concussion was made just six times, and many athletes had no symptoms until several hours after taking a hit.

Kate Mahoney poses for a 2005 portrait in front of the Blessed Mother Marianne casket in the Franciscan Chapel at the Sisters of St. Francis motherhouse in Syracuse, N.Y. Mahoney's recovery from a serious childhood illness is attributed to prayers by Sister Mary Laurence Hanley to Mother Marianne, who died in 1918. This Sunday, almost a century after she died at the remote Kalaupapa leprosy settlement in 1918, the Vatican will formally recognize her as a saint.

This 1883 file photo provided by the Sisters of St. Francis of the Neumann Communities shows Mother Marianne Cope, a nun who dedicated her life to caring for exiled leprosy patients on Kalau-papa in Hawaii.

Americans to be elevated to sainthood

The Associated Press

HONOLULU—In life, Mother Marianne Cope was known for her strength and kindness, battling bureaucrats in Hawaii as she led a group of fellow Franciscan nuns to care for leprosy patients in the islands.

And since her death 100 years ago, she has been credited with helping cure two people.

On Sunday, Mother Marianne will be declared a saint, with the Vatican formally recognizing what her supporters have long believed in their hearts: She is in heaven and that through her intercession two people were miraculously cured of ailments that should have killed them.

At the ceremony presided over by Pope Benedict XVI, the church will also canonize six others, including Kateri Tekakwitha, a 17th-century Mohawk Indian who spent most of her life in what is now upstate New York.

Bishop Larry Silva of the Honolulu diocese said the church canonizes people so adherents can be inspired by their example to go to heaven and become saints themselves.

Skydiver's feat could influence new age of design in spacesuits

The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.— Now that the dust has settled in the New Mexico desert where supersonic skydiver “Fearless Felix” Baumgartner landed safely on his feet, researchers are exhilarated over the possibility his exploit could someday help save the lives of pilots and space travelers in a disaster.

Baumgartner's death-defying jump Sunday from a balloon 24 miles above Earth yielded a wealth of information about the punishing effects of extreme speed and altitude on the human body — insights that could inform the development of improved spacesuits, new training procedures and emergency medical treatment.

A NASA engineer who specializes in astronaut escape systems said Baumgartner's mission "gives us a good foundation" for improving the odds of survival for professional astronauts, space tourists and high-altitude pilots and passengers.

"What I would hope is that, perhaps, this is just the first step of many, many advancements to come" in emergency bailouts, said Dustin Gohmert, who heads NASA's crew survival engineering office at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

In an interview after Baumgartner became the first skydiver to break the speed of sound, Gohmert noted that researchers have spent decades working on self-contained space escape systems, with no significant advances since Joe Kittinger in 1960 jumped from 19.5 miles up and reached 614 mph, records that stood until Sunday.

Baumgartner's feat was sponsored by energy drink maker Red Bull, and NASA had no role. But Dr. Jonathan Clark, a former NASA flight surgeon who lost his wife, Laurel, in the space shuttle Columbia accident and dedicated himself to improving crew escape systems, was in charge of Baumgartner's medical team.

And he was thrilled at how much was learned.

By going well beyond Mach 1, or the speed of sound, Baumgartner provided even more data than anticipated. Wearing a pressurized suit and helmet, he accelerated to an astonishing 834 mph and was supersonic longer than expected. The speed of sound at that altitude is close to 700 mph.

"It was Mach 1.24, which is really huge. I mean, that's a much higher level than we'd ever anticipated, so we learned a lot by going faster and higher," said Clark, who teaches at the Baylor College School of Medicine.

Clark said his team is still analyzing all the medical data — heart rate, blood pressure and the like — collected from sensors on Baumgartner's body.

During his descent through the stratosphere, Baumgartner went into an out-of-control spin for about 40 seconds, experiencing around 2.5 G's, or 2.5 times the force of gravity, before stabilizing himself.

Baumgartner's technique for righting himself may prove useful for companies like Virgin Galactic that are developing spacecraft that will take tourists up into space and right back down. These enterprises will need to have some sort of emergency escape plan.

NASA's next-generation spaceship, the Orion vehicle intended for deep-space exploration, will parachute home like the old-style Mercury, Gemini and Apollo capsules. The lessons learned from Baumgartner's effort probably won't apply directly to the Orion design, since it will be safer for astronauts to remain in the vessel all the way back to Earth. Gohmert said.

the only industrial development organization in Henderson or Henderson County. It did it all.” Its board members worked with the city to help build the former Technical Tape Christmas wrapping paper plant in the early 1960s. “It really kicked off manufacturing in Henderson,” Woodring said. Even bigger projects followed in the late 1960s and early 1970s with the success recruitment of a trio of Fortune 500-type industries: the Eaton Axle (now Dana Holding) truck axle plant, the Anaconda (now Rio Tinto Alcan) aluminum smelter and the Firestone Steel (now Accuride) truck wheel plant. Those three plants at one point employed more than 2,000 people with good wages and benefits, helping make Henderson County one of the most prosperous counties in the state. The industrial foundation also acquired property on U.S. 60-West that was developed into industrial sites that became home to factories such as Eaton, Gibbs Die Casting and the former Cyanede Plastics, then did the same on U.S. 41-South to provide sites for Cresline Plastic Pipe and small plants. In the 1980s, community leaders felt a need for a full-time industrial development agent, leading to the creation of the Henderson Area Economic Development Council. The EDC was effectively absorbed into the four-county Northwest Kentucky Forward in late 2005. NWKF today has an eight-person staff engaged in industrial recruitment, working with existing industries, helping entrepreneurs, offering workforce training and advocating for public education; it recently opened a business incubator in the Soaper Building in downtown Henderson. But long before that, the industrial foundation was essential in attracting factories and jobs. “During the time the industrial foundation was in charge of industrial development, we had a very successful program,” West said. “It would take 10 fingers to name the major industries they located here.” “That brought billions of dollars of wealth and thousands of jobs,” Brad Schneider, the president of the Henderson Chamber of Commerce, said Thursday. Industrial foundation founders and board members “were volunteers who wanted something more and bigger for Henderson,” Schneider said. “Led by C.B. and others, they turned it from a sleepy tobacco and mill town into a regional manufacturing center.” “I hope we can all learn from their example,” he said. “A few dedicated citizens can make monumental changes.”

its workers are involved in numerous civic and charitable activities. For its economic and civic contributions to the community, Audubon Metals on Thursday was named the Henderson Chamber of Commerce's 2012 Industry of the Year. The company, which opened in 1996, buys non-ferrous metals from scrap yards across the eastern third of the United States. The plant washes, separates, melts and re-alloys second aluminum ingot, much of which is used at Gibbs, which like Audubon Metals is owned by Evansville-based Koch Enterprises Inc. “They’re one of our major suppliers,” Rapagnani said. “One of their values is to be best in class,” something Audubon Metals pursues by providing training to employees through Henderson Community College, the Northwest Kentucky Training Consortium and Dale Carnegie, he said. The company and its team members “give back to the community,” Rapagnani said. “They’re one of the leading participants in the United Way campaign,” to which the employees pledged and gave more than $50,000, not counting the company's matching funds. “Team members have participated in the March of Dimes walk for many years, and in 2012, were awarded the No. 1 corporate team,” he said. Other community involvement includes the Junior Diabetes Research Foundation Walk at Holiday World, the Chilly Hilley Run for Junior Achievement, the Henderson Lions Club Auction, food drives, the Evansville Ballet, Big River/Big Sister and the Susan G. Komen Bowl for the Cure. Audubon Metals sponsors various school and community children's sports, and participated in the Back to School Blitz for Henderson County School. Last fall, employees participated in student mentoring and career programs at local schools. Last Christmas, plant employees raffled tickets to raise more than $5,000 to help a temporary employee's young son who had just undergone open heart surgery. Audubon Metals is a significant supporter of local businesses, spending millions of dollars each year with businesses such as Brenntag Mid-South, Home Oil and Gas, Huff Technologies, Galloway Electric, Hazex Construction, Park Machine, D&G Trucking, Business Equipment, Spartan Staffing, Sureway, Papa Johns, Fast Print, Quad City, J&B BBQ and D&M Grocery. The company's president and general manager, Jim Butkus, is active in the Henderson Chamber, serving on its board of directors and as chairman of existing industry and business development and on the Industrial Liaison Committee. “Audubon Metals is a labor of love,” Butkus said in accepting the company's award. “We have a slogan: ‘No.1 is a team thing.’ We're only successful because of our team.” A self-described transplanted Yankee, he said he “found a tremendous work ethic and a desire to learn and grow” and give back to the community among the company's workers. “We’ve been dealt a tremendous hand,” Butkus said. “This community gave us good cards.”

fuel tanks to accommodate them.” Despite the airport staff's best efforts to provide them snacks, coffee and soft drinks, the Snowbirds were on a mission to return to base. “So as soon as they attended to the needs of the equipment and personnel, they kicked the tires and lit the fires, each flight of three leaving at about 10-minute intervals, just as they (had) arrived,” the website said. It was unclear, the website said, why the Snowbirds selected Henderson's airport over airports in Evansville and Owensboro, “we just tried to give them our best and invited them back any time.” Scott Miller, chairman of the airport board, said he believes the jets took in 225 gallons each or roughly 2,025 gallons of fuel total. He added that the airport could not have accommodated the flight team for a quick refueling without the new fuel farm.

He added that he asked the Don Davis Aviation line man manager if the old fuel farm could have supported the visitors and was told the crews would have had to check into a hotel before returning the next day. “The new fuel farm is many times faster for refueling planes/fuel trucks, and much safer,” Miller said. Parker said in an email that was forwarded to The Gleaner that this is an important story not just for Henderson, but for all general aviation airports.

“This is just another example of why investing in general aviation airports is a wise investment indeed,” he said. Dick Wham, a board member and former chairman of the board, described the Snowbirds' stop in Henderson as a “once in a lifetime visit from a world-famous military aerobatics team. Thanks to all of you who helped in the development of the airport.” For more information on the Snowbirds, visit <http://www.rcaf-arc.forces.gc.ca/snowbirds/index-eng.asp>

The cancerous mass was initially found in her lower back but has spread to her lungs, her mother said. Another mass has been located in another part of her back, but it hasn't spread anywhere, Veach said. Kelsey is currently taking part in a research study and will have a stem cell transplant when she has very little cancer in her body, her mother said. “They want to shrink it as much as possible and then transplant,” Veach said. Meanwhile, because Kelsey needs to monitor her blood count, it's unclear if she will be able to attend the CureSearch Walk. But that's understandable. Besides, there will be plenty of others who will be there to benefit CureSearch for Children's Cancer. A national nonprofit foundation, its mission is to fund and support children's cancer research and to provide information and resources to all those affected by children's cancer. Evansville residents Mike and Meagan Feller know this well. Their son, Ryan, now 7, was diagnosed with a rare and aggressive liver cancer called Hepatoblastoma two years ago. Ryan is now in remission. But he will be one of the past and present child cancer patients who will be honored on the stage during the CureSearch Walk's opening ceremonies. who lost their battle with cancer. The goal of the walk is to celebrate and honor children whose lives have been affected by childhood cancer, while raising funds for lifesaving collaborative research, according to <http://www.curesearchwalk.org/faf/home/default.asp?event=1036392&lis=1&kntae1036392=9E9A4CF9CAFI4F3088D920A7589778DF> CureSearch supports clinical trials research at more than 180 local hospitals across the nation. their majors and career paths. “There's so much you can do with that field,” she added. “I chose that field because I just knew that I wanted to help people to get to the next level ... kind of like I did.” Her next goal is to start working full-time. In the meantime, however, Morris has helped recruit students for Murray State at various community events, such as the Help Henderson program that took place on Sept. 8. She's also interested in teaching, having worked as a substitute teacher in the past. And her experience at the local Murray State campus, she said, has been “fantastic. I've had a great experience. The professors have bent over backward, especially with this experience with my mother. I couldn't ask for a better university.” Morris' experience hasn't been easy, however, considering she's lucky to be alive at all. Fourteen years ago, Shaylee was just days old when her mother's blood pressure soared and she had a seizure. As her head swelled, Morris underwent emergency surgery, which revealed a baseball-sized clot in her brain. She recovered after being in and out of the hospital but could not drive for the first eight years after the blood clot was removed. In 2008, Morris was diagnosed with MS, which has caused her to have problems with her memory and her limbs. “Some days are better than others, but so far it has not prohibited me from doing anything that I normally do,” she said. Meanwhile, Morris has had other challenges, too, raising Shaylee as a single mother. A freshman at Henderson County High School, the daughter of Rick Morris is a vibrant teen who keeps her mother on her toes, her mother said. Yet she's also a dancer and a singer and “has a beautiful voice.” In fact, when Morris' mother, Hazel Newman Pleasant, died on Aug. 28, Shaylee sang Faith Hill's “There You'll Be” at the funeral as a tribute to her grandmother. “I suppose that it is pretty clear that Shaylee is very special to me,” she said. “I will have to say that I have done what I have done for me, however that little girl has always been my inspiration.” At the end of the day, Morris said, she cannot say enough positive things about adults returning to college, and that the staff at the local MSU campus has been like family to her. She added that a big part of her decision to pursue her master's degree was to set a positive example for Shaylee. “I know that she's proud of me,” Morris said. “And I know that she's felt the repercussions of how hard it's been. But she knows that I make good grades, and she's seen that it's been worth it, and I don't have any regrets as far as that goes.”

Cols hoping for long home stretch

■ They'll close district schedule tonight against Muhlenberg Co.

By Kevin Patton
kpatton@thegleaner.com
270-831-8350

Henderson County's focus this week has been less about its opponent and more about itself.

The 6-2 Colonels return to Colonel Stadium tonight for what they hope will be a long stretch of home games as they host Muhlenberg County in the annual homecoming contest and the final game of their 6-A First District schedule.

With a 2-0 district record, Henderson County has already secured the district championship and the top seed for the playoffs, which will begin two weeks from tonight.

"Three more games is all we have guaranteed," said Henderson County coach Clay Clevenger, whose team will host Owensboro next week before opening postseason play at home on Nov. 2.

Despite comfortable wins the last two weeks over Daviess County and Marshall County, the Colonels have been stagnant in their improvement in recent weeks. "Good football teams get better on a weekly basis. If you're not getting better there's somebody else who is," Clevenger said. "Fern Creek (which is a potential first-round playoff opponent) nearly upset Ballard, the top seed in that district, last week. So they're definitely improving."

Barring an upset of Eastern tonight, Fern Creek will travel to Henderson County for the playoff opener.

Muhlenberg Co. vs. Henderson Co.
Site: Colonel Stadium
Kickoff: Tonight, 7 p.m.
Records: Henderson Co. 6-2; Muhlenberg Co. 1-7

In recent years, Clevenger has lightened the team's practice schedule as playoff time approached. He doesn't think that philosophy has worked with this year's squad and could be responsible for the team's lackluster play the last two weeks.

"It might be. I put it on me. I took the blame," Clevenger said. "We've had a good intense week of practice this week. We got back to the way we practiced early in the year. I'm anxious to see if we play that way."

The Colonels will also have one of their early-season offensive weapons available tonight. Jamal Hill, who has not played since the second game of the season, returned to practice this week after undergoing sinus surgery to alleviate headaches that kept him out of action much of the season.

Hill is still the team's second-leading receiver with six catches for 114 yards and had a big night in his last game at Evansville North when he had five catches including the game-winning touchdown with 0:42 to play.

"He gives us another weapon, especially once he and (quarterback Hunter) Comer get their timing down like they did in the preseason," Clevenger said.

Hill, who started the previous two seasons at cornerback, will also give the Colonels added depth in the secondary.

■ In other games tonight, Union County will host Todd County Central and Webster County will visit Paducah Tilghman.

Cards one away from Series!

■ They rout Giants 8-3 to take 3-1 lead in NLCS

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Adam Wainwright threw seven innings of four-hit ball and the St. Louis Cardinals roughed up Tim Lincecum and the San Francisco Giants in an 8-3 rout Thursday night that gave them a 3-1 lead in the NL championship series.

Matt Holliday, Jon Jay and Yadier Molina had two RBIs apiece to lead a 12-hit outburst by a team that batted just .198 through the first three games of the series.

The defending champion Cardinals can wrap up their second straight trip to the World Series as a wild card with a victory at home Friday night in Game 5. Lance Lynn faces Giants lefty Barry Zito.

Lincecum was a bust in his first postseason start since the World Series clincher over Texas in 2010, giving up four runs in 4 2-3 innings.

The two-time Cy Young Award winner with the quirky delivery earned a shot based on nearly spotless relief work earlier in the postseason but reverted to regular-season form, when he was 10-15 with a 5.18 ERA, worst among qualifying starters in the National League.

Wainwright was a glorified cheerleader while rehabbing from elbow reconstruction during the Cardinals' improbable title drive last fall after earning the wild card on the final day and then upsetting the favored Phillies, Brewers and Rangers to give manager Tony La Russa a chance to retire on top.

Under rookie manager

San Francisco Giants catcher Hector Sanchez can't handle the throw as the St. Louis Cardinals' Matt Carpenter scores from second on a single by Matt Holliday during the fifth inning of Game 4 of baseball's National League championship series on Thursday night in St. Louis. The Cardinals won 8-3 to take a 3-1 lead in the series. Game 5 is tonight in St. Louis.

Mike Matheny, the Cardinals were the final team to qualify this year, too. Once again, they've stepped up their game.

Wainwright bounced back from a rough outing in Game 5 of the NL division series, striking out five and walking none for his first career postseason victory as a starter. The lone damage against him came on Hunter Pence's first homer and RBI of the postseason, a second-inning clout estimated at 451 feet that soared over the visitor's bullpen into the bleachers in left-center to cut the Cardinals' lead to 2-1.

Now, the 14-game winner is on the verge of his first World Series as an active player since striking out Brandon Inge as the stand-in closer for injured

Jason Isringhausen in the 2006 clincher over the Tigers.

Just 12 pitches in, the Cardinals had two hits and the lead and Lincecum got a visit from pitching coach Dave Righetti. Jay opened the first with a single, Matt Carpenter walked on four pitches and Holliday singled up the middle for the lead. Allen Craig tacked on a sacrifice fly.

Lincecum escaped trouble in the second after issuing two more walks, one of them on five pitches to Wainwright. The Cardinals missed a chance to add on after Pete Kozma reached on third baseman Pablo Sandoval's fielding error to open the inning when he was thrown out trying to steal.

Lincecum had retired eight in a row before running into trouble in the fifth.

Carpenter doubled off the top of the wall in right-center with one out. He held up until Holliday's single fell in front of fast-charging center fielder Angel Pagan, but third base coach Jose Oquendo aggressively waved Carpenter home.

The relay from shortstop Brandon Crawford was in time, but short-hopped catcher Hector Sanchez and Carpenter scored on a headfirst slide to make it 3-1 and Holliday went to second on the play. Molina's two-out RBI single made it 4-1 and was the knockout blow for Lincecum.

Pence, who called himself "the goat" of Game 3 after stranding seven runners, hit the secondlongest home run by an opposing player at 7-year-old Busch Stadium with a 451-foot drive that sailed over the visitor's bullpen into the bleachers in left-center.

Holliday's RBI single was the first by a Cardinals starter since Carlos Beltran's two-run homer in the fourth inning of Game 1. Holliday entered 2 for 12 in the NLCS with no RBIs.

Sandoval hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

■ Notes: Cardinals Hall of Famers Stan Musial and Ozzie Smith made pre-game appearances. The 91-year-old Musial toured the warning track in a golf cart while waving to fans and Smith threw out the first pitch. Smith's son, Nikko Smith, a former American Idol finalist, sang the national anthem.

Lady Cols rally past Caldwell, reach final

PRINCETON, Ky. — With backs to the wall, Henderson County came back from a 2-0 deficit to beat three-time defending region champion Caldwell County Thursday in the semifinals of the Second Region Volleyball Tournament.

The 18-25, 25-27, 25-13, 25-17, 15-12 victory sent the Lady Colonels (33-5) into Saturday night's championship match against Christian County, which advanced with a 3-0 victory over Hopkins Central in Thursday's other semifinal.

With a vocal crowd of approximately 750 at Caldwell County's gym, the players and the fans celebrated every point.

"They are the team we wanted to play in the championship game, and it felt like a championship game, but we know that Christian County will be just as good," said Henderson County's Katelyn McMillan, who led the team in both kills with 18 and digs with 20.

Caldwell County (27-10) had the Lady Colonels on the ropes especially after the heartbreaking loss in the second game.

"I couldn't be prouder of the girls for overcoming the adversity of being down 2-0," Henderson County coach Mary Howard said.

McMillan said the team only had to think back to the regular season meeting between the teams in Henderson when the Lady Colonels dropped the first game — by an identical 25-18 score — then reeled off three straight wins.

"We knew we could beat them because we beat them at our place. We had to focus on the simple things of the game — simple serving and simple passing," McMillan said.

Henderson County took over the momentum by leading the entire third game and put it away by scoring the last seven points with Jessica Cannon serving.

The Lady Colonels trailed only once in the fourth game at 6-5 and took control as nine straight points with Meredith Proctor serving increased the lead from 10-9 to 19-9.

Trigg County edged Madisonville 3-2 in the boys regional soccer tournament semifinals on Thursday at Colonel Field to advance to the championship game.

Trigg was leading 2-0 at halftime on Wednesday night when the game was suspended because of inclement weather.

Henderson County will face Trigg County in the championship game, which is set for Saturday at 10 a.m. at Colonel Field.

The Colonels defeated Hopkinsville 5-2 in the semifinals on Wednesday.

EDDYVILLE, Ky. — The conclusion of the storm-delayed Second Region semifinal between Henderson County and Hopkinsville took an offensive tone after the team's scored just one goal in Wednesday's first half of play.

The Lady Tigers (19-3) claimed a 6-4 win Thursday at Lyon County's Lee S. Jones Park to earn a spot in Saturday's championship match against Madisonville (20-1-1).

Leading 1-0 at the half when approaching storms halted play on Wednesday, Hopkinsville needed three minutes to force Henderson County (10-8-4) to change its game plan. Abigail Curtis put the Lady Tigers ahead 2-0 at the 43:00 mark with a shot from 20 yards out.

"When they got the first goal to put them up 2-0, that changed the whole complexion of the game," Henderson County coach Doc De-Witt said. "We had to go from defense to offense. We needed goals, but that left us susceptible in the back, especially to their counterattacks."

With the lineup adjustments, the match turned into a shootout. The teams scored four goals apiece the rest of the way, including two own goals each.

"Ours were going to be goals anyway, but the two they had we just kicked in," DeWitt said.

Maddie Gish quickly cut the Lady Tigers' lead back to 2-1 before they scored two straight own goals to increase the lead to 4-1.

The Lady Colonels pulled within two on three occasions on goals by Hannah Buley, Julia Mathews and Christin Poole but could get no closer.

Lexie Bozell scored three goals for Hopkinsville, which advanced to Saturday's 5 p.m. final.

The winner will move on to the first round of the state tournament which will be played Monday at First Region champion Murray.

Tigers finish sweep of Yanks

■ Detroit rolls to 8-1 victory, captures berth in World Series

By Noah Trister
Associated Press

DETROIT — Max Scherzer capped a stupendous stretch for Detroit's starting rotation, and the Tigers advanced to the World Series for the second time in seven years by beating the New York Yankees 8-1 Thursday for a four-game sweep of the AL championship series. Miguel Cabrera and Jhonny Peralta hit two-run homers in a four-run fourth inning against CC Sabathia, who was unable to prevent the Yankees from getting swept in a postseason series for the first time in 32 years.

"Yeah, we did it," Cabrera said. "It's an unbelievable feeling. ... Four more wins, guys. Four more wins." Scherzer took a no-hit bid into the sixth against a New York starting lineup that was again without Alex Rodriguez, who flied out with two on in the sixth as a pinch hitter. Austin Jackson added a solo shot in the seventh for Detroit, and Peralta hit another homer an inning later. The game ended with first baseman Prince Fielder, Detroit's prized offseason acquisition, gleefully calling off his teammates on Jayson Nix's popup and making the catch for the final out. The Tigers spilled onto the field for a celebration that began near second base and eventually moved closer to the third-base line.

The Detroit Tigers celebrate after winning Game 4 of the American League championship series 8-1 over the New York Yankees on Thursday in Detroit. The Tigers move on to the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals or San Francisco Giants.

Detroit won its 11th American League pennant and first since 2006. The Tigers have five days off before the World Series starts Wednesday at defending champion St. Louis or 2010 winner San Francisco. After scoring in just three of 39 innings during the series, New York heads home to face unpleasant questions about its future following a postseason of awful hitting, benched stars and veterans showing the wear and tear of age. Rodriguez, the $275 million third baseman, was out of the starting lineup for the third time in the playoffs. Derek Jeter and Mariano Rivera could only watch following season-ending injuries. The Yankees hit .188 in the postseason and .157 in the LCS. New York went quietly in the ninth inning, with the Comerica Park crowd chanting "Sweep!" while the last three batters made out in order. Detroit outhit New York 16-2 in the finale and 46-22 in the series. Without a World Series title since 1984, Detroit lost to Texas in last year's ALCS but signed Fielder in the offseason. The excitement of that bold move subsided a bit when the Tigers struggled to a 26-32 start in the AL Central, but they overtook the Chicago White Sox in the final 10 days of the regular season and won the division with an 88-74 record, matching the Cardinals for the fewest wins among the 10 playoff teams. And in the postseason, their starting rotation has been impeccable. Scherzer, Justin Ver-lander, Anibal Sanchez and Doug Fister allowed only two earned runs against the Yankees. New York was shut out once and totaled six runs in the series. "Unbelievable. It's why we're here right now because out pitching," Cabrera said. "Wow!" The Yankees lost Jeter to a broken ankle in the opening game, and the slumping Rodriguez was benched for Game 3. He was out of the starting lineup for Game 4 too, but A-Rod did have one last chance to turn his postseason around when Scherzer was lifted for left-hander Drew Smyly with two outs in the sixth and the Tigers up 6-1. As Smyly finished warming up, Rodriguez popped out of the dugout to pinch hit for Raul Ibanez, but with men on first and third, he hit a routine fly to center field. He grounded out in the ninth, completing a postseason with no RBIs. The Yankees failed to win a game in a postseason series for only the fifth time. They hadn't been swept since a best-of-five ALCS against Kansas City in 1980. The last team to sweep four straight against them had been Cincinnati in the 1976 World Series. Detroit also beat New York in the division series in 2006 and last year. The Tigers became the first team to win three straight postseason series against the Yankees, according to STATS, LLC. New York never led in this series — the only other time that's happened to the Yankees was when they were swept by the Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1963 World Series.

Perry and Wright split the carries for Cardinals

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Louisville's plan to double up on its ground game has turned out better than the No. 16 Cardinals had scripted. Splitting carries between running backs Senorise Perry and Jeremy Wright has improved the ground game, which has resulted in a more balanced Louisville offensive attack entering Saturday's Big East Conference game against South Florida. Perry leads Louisville (6-0, 1-0) with 559 yards and nine touchdowns on 96 carries, just three less than Wright's 99 attempts for 450 yards and six TDs. Most notable is Louisville's 17 rushing touchdowns, four more than all of last season.

Though passing still accounts for nearly 60 percent of the Cardinals' 2,455 yards, the ground game's improvement has eased the burden on sophomore quarterback Teddy Bridgewater. "Each week when you break down the percentage of yards, it's almost even, like 50/50 or 60/40," Bridgewater said. Offensive coordinator Shawn "Watson does a great job of just calling plays and developing a great game plan." Bridgewater said he could almost see the balance coming. "That's how it was in the spring and training camp," he said. "We had a balanced identity." As the season has progressed, Perry and Wright have taken turns having big games. Perry earned Big East offensive honors for last week's four-touchdown, 101-yard performance on just 12 carries at Pitt. Trailing 21-17 at halftime, he rallied the Cardinals with three second-half scores including a 59-yard run with 2:25 remaining to seal the 45-35 victory in their conference opener. Wright had the other touchdown from 4 yards, finishing with 61 on 13 carries. It marked Louisville's fifth game with a 100-yard rusher, after just one last year. "We weren't satisfied because we both could've come out with a hundred yards in the game or more," said Perry, whose 54 points lead the conference. "But there are a lot of things we need to get done and are going to get done. "We were more satisfied with the 'W.'" Wright has had his moments, too. He scored three times and rushed for 105 yards in a season-opening victory over Kentucky — Perry had a game-high 108 yards in that game — adding 114 and a touchdown on 20 touches two games later to help Louisville beat North Carolina. Where the 6-foot Perry's quickness has allowed him to break big plays, 5-foot-11 Wright has displayed every-down back ability while starting each game. Both though have had 20-carry games. "Coaches wanted us to go hard every day," said Wright, adding that they support each other through the competition. "One of us tries to make good plays, and the other tries to come back (and do the same). That's what keeps our edge."

Tight end Doyle thriving for Toppers

■ Senior trying to close career at WKU with flourish this year

The Associated Press

BOWLING GREEN — As you'd expect from a senior, Jack Doyle is trying to close his Western Kentucky career with a flourish. The tight end again leads the Hilltoppers (5-1, 2-0 Sun Belt Conference) in receiving, catching 27 passes for 242 yards entering Saturday's showdown against Louisiana-Monroe (4-2, 2-0). Doyle's also on the mid-season watch list for the John Mackey Award, given to the nation's best player at that position. Pro scouts have already seen a lot of him at practice this fall. Right now he's happy to be a scoring option again, after catching a nine-yard touchdown pass last week against Troy State. That ended a two-year drought and made Doyle the third Hilltoppers tight end to score this season with Tim Gorski and Mitchell Henry. They expect more to follow. "I always told Jack, 'It'll be just like that jar of olives. Once you get the first one out, the rest will come pretty easy,'" Western Kentucky coach Willie Taggart said. Especially since Doyle and the Hilltoppers' offense have always seemed made for each other. In a system Taggart learned under then-Stanford coach Jim Harbaugh, now coaching the NFL's San Francisco 49ers, Western Kentucky uses at least two tight ends on every snap. Doyle has thrived in it, recording career and team highs of 52 catches for 614 yards last season. He needs 33 receptions to break Jake Gaebler's school record of 168 from 2006-09. "It's a lot of fun," the Indianapolis native said. "I don't know what other offense you'd rather play in." The group that calls itself "Tight End U" has combined for almost 40 percent of the team's catches this season while their blocking has paved the way for Western Kentucky's 197 rushing yards per game, the Sun Belt's third-best average. "That's just really hard on the defense when you have tight ends that aren't just one-dimensional," said Henry, a sophomore from nearby Elizabethtown. Henry has complemented Doyle particularly in the red zone. With defenses stacked up to stop Doyle, Henry has three touchdowns on nine catches. Gorski, a freshman, has a touchdown. "You can't guard both of us," Henry said. "In this offense, if we've got two tight ends in there we can run the ball or we can pass the ball. ... Anyone can make a play." Doyle has made plenty for Western Kentucky. After redshirting in 2008, Doyle started 10 games in 2009 and caught 37 passes for 365 yards and a touchdown. He was on pace to surpass those numbers in 2010 before an injury forced him to miss WKU's final five games. Doyle never expected his touchdown catch on Oct. 9 that season against Florida International to be his last one for more than two years. The 79-catch drought finally ended in the second quarter of last Thursday's win over Troy State, when quarterback Kawaun Jakes found Doyle for a nine-yard score. "It was just good to get it out of the way," Doyle said. In playing parallel roles on the field, Henry said Doyle has also been a mentor for younger players such as himself. That's not surprising, considering he wants to coach high school or college football after his playing days are over. "It's just like having another coach out there," Henry said.

QB Murray is pulling for Florida to help Georgia

By Charles Odum
Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — Aaron Murray isn't asking Georgia fans to wear Florida's orange and blue on Saturday. He's not expecting to see Bulldogs fans doing the Gator chomp. All the same, the quarterback said Georgia fans can cheer for Florida against South Carolina on Saturday, if only for that one day. "I definitely am," Murray said. Murray realizes No 13 Georgia, which plays at Kentucky on Saturday night, needs help in the Southeastern Conference East Division race. Florida can provide that help. Georgia (5-1, 3-1 SEC) trails Florida and South Carolina in the division. The Bulldogs could move to the top of the East if Florida tops South Carolina while Georgia beats Kentucky and beats Florida next week. Go Gators? Murray smiled at the suggestion. "I think everyone has a free pass as a Georgia fan to root for them," Murray said. "I'm not saying deck out in Florida gear but definitely we would be a little happier if they came out with a victory on Saturday." Georgia was off last week after its lopsided 35-7 loss at South Carolina on Oct. 6. The loss robbed Georgia of its ability to control its fate in the division. "It definitely stinks we're not in the driver's seat right now and we definitely have a lot of work to do," Murray said. "We have to make sure we win the remainder of our games. If we lose even one more, we have no shot of getting to Atlanta." The Bulldogs' hopes in the division were lifted when South Carolina (6-1, 4-1 SEC) lost to LSU last week. The Gamecocks would win a tie-breaker with Georgia if each team finishes with one conference loss. Florida (6-0, 5-0 SEC) is left as the only undefeated team in the East. Georgia plays Florida next week in Jacksonville. With a win next week, Georgia would win a tie-breaker with the Gators. Coach Mark Richt has reminded his players the Bulldogs can still win the division. Richt uses the 2011 season as a history lesson for his team. Georgia started last season 0-2, including a loss to South Carolina. It closed the regular season with 10 straight wins to advance to the SEC championship game, where it lost to LSU. Richt doesn't want his team, which is favored by 27 ½ points against Kentucky (1-6, 0-4 SEC), looking ahead to the Florida game. "We need to beat Kentucky right now," Richt said. "That's really all I'm worried about right now, and then the next week we'll worry about that game."

SEC coaching seats are heating up

■ Talk about replacements is rampant at some schools

By Mark Long
Associated Press

The Southeastern Conference could be getting another makeover.

This one would have nothing to do with expansion.

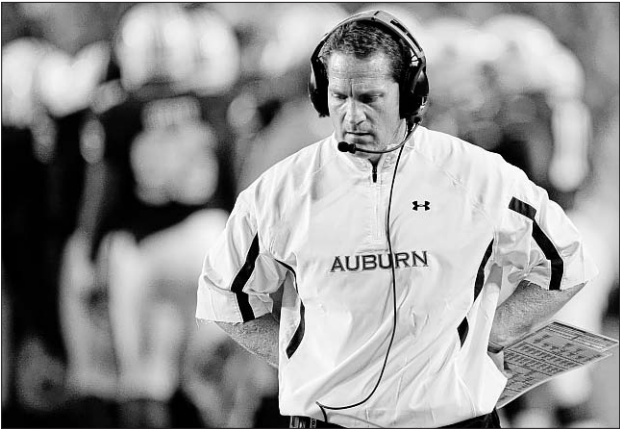

The league that has won six consecutive national championships has more coaches on the proverbial “hot seat” than in any recent year, with potential openings at Arkansas, Auburn, Kentucky and Tennessee. The Razorbacks are seemingly in disarray, while the Tigers, Wildcats and Volunteers have had all sorts of on-field problems.

With the season a little past the halfway point, talk about possible replacements is more rampant than speculation about the upcoming recruiting class or even basketball season. Well, not at Kentucky.

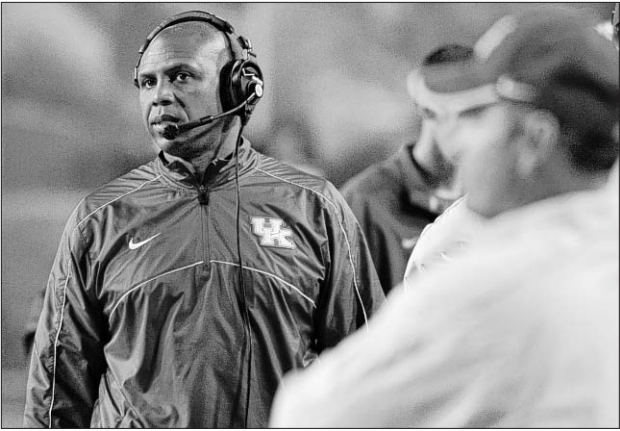

Still, all that conjecture can make a long season feel like it’s never going to end.

“There can be outside distractions whether you’re doing great or whether you’re doing not as well as you certainly would like to be doing,” Auburn coach Gene Chizik said. “The great thing about college football is everybody’s got an opinion. It’s the greatest sport on the planet, and part of what makes it so great in this part of the country is that everybody does have an opinion.

“When you get into this, if you’re not strong enough

Auburn's Gene Chizik, left, who won a national championship just two seasons ago but whose Tigers have fallen on hard times, and Kentucky's Joker Phillips, right, whose Wildcats have struggled the past two seasons, are two of the Southeastern Conference football coaches said to be on the proverbial “hot seat.” Other SEC coaches feeling the heat are Arkansas' John L. Smith, whose Razorbacks are seemingly in disarray, and Tennessee's Derek Dooley, whose Vols have fared poorly in SEC play.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

to handle that, then you're in the wrong business — both as a player and as a coach.”

The way things have unfolded at Arkansas, Auburn, Kentucky and Tennessee, it could be gut-check time for all four coaches and their assistants.

The Razorbacks fired coach Bobby Petrino in April for hiring his mistress to a position in the athletic department and initially lying about her presence during a motorcycle accident. Athletic director Jeff Long then hired former Michigan State and Louisville head coach John L. Smith to a 10-month contract.

Arkansas (3-4, 2-2 SEC) went 1-4 in September, including home losses to Louisiana-Monroe and Rutgers. Making matters worse for Smith, he mistakenly referred to Arkansas as Alabama during a speech and told reporters to smile two days after a 52-0 loss to the top-ranked Crimson Tide. Smith also is making headlines for his $40.7 million bankruptcy.

Long said Monday he would like to have the team's next coach in place two weeks after the regular season. He has not ruled out Smith as a candidate, but given all that has happened this season, it's hard to fathom any scenario in which Smith stays in Fayetteville.

“In the end, it becomes who is interested in us,” Long said. “Even though I have had quite a long time to look at and research coaches, I don't know who is truly interested in us and we won't know that really until almost the end game because we've all seen other searches within this conference where they've ended up with their second, third choice so to speak.”

Auburn secretly interviewed Petrino late in the 2003 season — while Tommy Tuberville was still the Tigers' head coach — and many wonder whether Auburn would go after the offensive-minded coach again.

Of course, that would mean firing Chizik two years after winning a national championship.

The Tigers (1-5, 0-4) rank last in the SEC in total offense, clearly struggling with the transition from Gus Malzahn's spread offense to Scot Loeffler's pro-style system. Auburn has lost six consecutive SEC games by a combined score of 192-68 and is trying to avoid the program's first 1-6 start since 1952.

Maybe the most telling mark is Chizik's 17-15 record without 2010 Heisman Trophy Cam Newton.

“You have to be strong enough to be able to block out the positives when they're telling you how great you are because you're never that great,” Chizik said. “You have to be able to block out the negatives when they tell you how bad you are because you're never that bad. That's the message that I give to our team on a daily basis. How much they choose to listen and buy into what everybody's opinion, I can't control that.”

Kentucky (1-6, 0-4), meanwhile, has lost 13 of its last 17 games under coach Joker Phillips. The Wildcats have failed to build off that 2010 bowl berth, prompting the fan base to clamor for change.

Phillips said Monday he talks with athletic director Mitch Barnhart a couple of times a week, but just about “small talk.

“He's been very encouraging,” Phillips said. “It's nothing which you want to get at. One thing Mitch and I are: We're friends. That's more important to me than anything on the business side. We are friends.

“And I can tell you this: there are not a lot of people out there that can say that they're friends with their AD. There are not a lot of them. One thing that I do cherish and I do appreciate is our friendship.”

Expectations at Kentucky hardly compare to those at Tennessee, where coach Derek Dooley has come under fire after conference losses keep piling up.

The Volunteers (3-3, 0-3) are 14-17 in Dooley's three seasons, but just 4-15 in SEC play. They also are 0-13 against Top-25 opponents, and Dooley's first two years produced the program's first consecutive losing seasons since 1909-11.

There have been signs of progress, though.

Tennessee, outscored

by an average of 19 points in seven SEC losses last year, led Florida in the second half and trailed by a score in the fourth quarter against Georgia and Mississippi State. But will that kind of improvement be enough to keep Dooley in Knoxville?

“More than anything, you have to define who you are, not somebody else,” Dooley said. “It's a life lesson. You can't let somebody else define who you are. The best way to define who you are is when you make a mistake or you don't play well, you don't dwell on it. You don't make an excuse. You don't try to defend it. You just focus on the next mission and be proud of what you put into it every day.

“When you do that, you feel good about yourself as a man. You feel good about yourself as a player and you go do the best you can. Right now, we haven't done the best we can. That's what we ought to be concerned about.”

The Vols have plenty of company in that department.

Four coaching changes would be rare in the SEC, which hasn't had that many since Florida, LSU, Mississippi and South Carolina hired new coaches following the 2004 season.

“I've been through tremendous, fantastic things as a coach in college football,” Chizik said. “I've been through some battles. I understand how the whole ebb and flow of the nature of a college football season may go, good or bad. ... I think most of our kids hear that and they understand it and they learn lessons, because a lot of our guys on our team have heard the same story two years ago, but it was flipped.”

Big East basketball bracing to lose long-time stalwarts

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Notre Dame coach Mike Brey walked into Big East media day at the New York Athletic Club, saw the table with a large card bearing the school's name and faked a sigh of relief.

“I thought we would be in a closet,” Brey said Wednesday, anticipating the reaction to Notre Dame announcing last month it was leaving the Big East for the Atlantic Coast Conference. “I thought they would put us where Pitt and Syracuse were last year.”

This was the last Big East media day for Pittsburgh and Syracuse, who announced last year they were leaving for the ACC.

West Virginia left after last season for the Big 12. Pitt and Syracuse go after this season and Notre Dame could go after 2012-13 or wait one more season before leaving.

Conference movement is a way of life in college sports. Schools are playing in leagues whose names don't make sense anymore — by numbers or direction.

“The Big East is a committed group of schools,” said new commissioner Mike Aresco, a former television executive. “I'm no prophet but we think expansion has subsided and we have a solid core. TV is a hugely important issue. It provides financial stability for the conference, confidence for conference membership and also exposure in a wide variety of platforms for the schools.”

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim let everybody know right away all questions Wednesday would be about the Big East and this season alone.

“They knew we were going last year,” Boeheim said when asked about how the other fans in the league might treat the Orange in their last conference visit. “I just hope we have the same record as last year on the road (9-1 in true road games). T h e y ’ v e never liked us since I've been here anyway.”

Pitt coach Jamie Dixon said he thinks the Panthers playing their last season in the Big East is “something to be written and talked about.”

“The Big East has gone through so many shifts with teams coming and going,” he said, referring to the 17 schools that have joined (and some left) the league since seven charter schools began play in 1979-80. “Players play. Coaches coach. There are six teams in the ACC that are Big East teams. ... The Big East is the best conference and it has been over the last several season. We're leaving a great place and going to a great place. It's not a big change. What it is is beyond our control. College athletics the way it is today is money, TV and all those things factor in. But for coaches and teams they just want great basketball conferences to play in.”

When the talk about teams going and coming (UCF, Houston, Memphis, Temple and SMU join next season) slowed down, there was plenty to go over about the upcoming season.

Louisville, which has three starters back from last season's Final Four team, was the unanimous choice for first place in the coaches' preseason poll.

The Cardinals, who won the Big East tournament last season, received 14 first-place votes and Notre Dame got the other, obviously from Louisville coach Rick Pitino.

“There are probably 40 schools right now that have a chance in college basketball the way it is today,” Pitino said. “Last year Duke, Connecticut and Pittsburgh were all ranked in the national preseason Top Ten. Duke lost in the first round of the NCAA tournament to Lehigh. Connecticut lost to Iowa State in the first round and Pitt didn't even make the tournament.

“You've got to be a great defensive team to make it to the Final Four and we are a great defensive team. We're not there yet with some things but we certainly are a good defensive team. ... We could have the best 10 players in America. We have 10 really good guys.”

Syracuse, coming off a school-record 34-3 mark, was second and Notre Dame, which returns all five starters, was third.

Cincinnati was fourth followed by Georgetown, Pittsburgh, Marquette, USF, Connecticut, St. John's, Rutgers, Villanova, DePaul, Seton Hall and Providence.

Connecticut faces one of the biggest changes in the country following the retirement of Jim Calhoun, who will be remembered for turning a regional program into a national power in his 26 years in Storrs. He won an NIT championship in 1988 and national titles in 1999, 2004 and 2011. His teams won 10 Big East regular-season championships and seven Big East tournament titles.

Kevin Ollie, the man replacing Calhoun, used to run the offense for him as a point guard and also played relentless defense for the Huskies before heading off for a 12-year NBA career. Ollie's first season will be one that will end without participation in either the Big East or NCAA tournaments over academic shortcomings by the program.

“You see the NCAA tournament coming and you can get dejected and I have to control that,” Ollie said. “We have to accept it, face it and get over it. I would be lying to you if I said it didn't hurt.”

Email is useless, terrible way to connect, beyond saving

By David Menconi
Raleigh News and Observer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — If you send an email to Paul Jones, you won't hear back from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill professor. You will, however, receive an automated reply that could only have come from him.

“Good Bye Email, I'm divesting,” reads the subject line. The message says that Jones gave up email on June 1, 2011, and goes on to suggest more than a dozen ways to contact him: through Facebook, Twitter, Google +, Gtalk, AIM, Skype, LinkedIn, even YouTube.

Analysis

Going email-free is part of a grand experiment that Jones, who oversees the university's Ibiblio.org online archive, decided to undertake after analyzing his communication methods. He concluded that email took the most time and yielded the least useful communication, especially for those using mobile phones as much as computers. So he quit.

None of his university peers are convinced enough to follow his lead, and one even derided Jones' email divestiture as “false performance art.” But for those struggling with the time drain of email, the idea is tantalizing. Jones recalls a conversation he had with outgoing chancellor Holden Thorp.

“Holden told me, ‘I wish I could do no email,’ and that was a year ago,” Jones says. “Bet he really wishes that now.”

Jones insists he's not missing a thing being email-free. And not only is he gone, he's not coming back.

Thirty years ago, Jones not only helped write the code for UNC's first campus-wide email system, he also led efforts to get everyone to use it.

But now, between spam and the way people misuse it, he is convinced that email is beyond saving. Even when it's from someone he wants to hear from, Jones derides email as the least-effective way to communicate, breaking down into “formal exchanges of diplomatic papers,” or talking points.

Besides, Jones believes that the seeds of something better are already out there for most people.

“Most of the people I converted to email back then are now 50 and older and they say they don't want to learn anything new,” Jones says. “And they're already using Skype with their grandkids, or Facebook or Tumblr to share photos. You ask if they text: ‘Yeah, to my children, but nobody else.’ Even the people who are most resistant, they've compartmentalized it. People are already doing this in their private lives, they hardly send email. So let's do it elsewhere, too.”

Whatever its flaws, however, email won't be going away in the near future. According to the Pew Research Center, email is tied with search engines at the top of the list of online activities; both are used by 92 percent of adults on the Internet.

Google issues a bad report, hurting Nasdaq

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Google plummeted almost $80 per share, more than 10 percent, and trading in the stock was halted two and a half hours Thursday after a disappointing earnings report was published ahead of schedule and surprised investors.

Bleak figures in the report about online advertising dragged down Facebook stock, too, and the Nasdaq composite index skidded 1 percent on a day when the broader stock market was mostly flat.

Google was trading at $754 per share at 12:30 p.m. EDT, then fell almost $20 in a minute after investors saw the report, a draft. It dropped as low as $676, and Google halted trading at 12:50 p.m., with the stock at $687.

The stock was halted until 3:20 p.m. Companies routinely halt trading when they have news to release to investors during the market day, but two and a half hours is an unusually long suspension.

When trading in Google resumed, the stock climbed slightly, but it still finished down $60.49, or 8 percent, at $695.

Google blamed a printing company, R.R. Donnelley & Sons, for filing its quarterly statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission more than three hours ahead of schedule.

R.R. Donnelley & Sons stock also plunged — as much as 71 cents, or 6.5 percent, to $10.14 — after the mistake. It later recovered most of the loss and ended the day down 9 cents.

The Google report said it earned $2.18 billion from July through September, down from $2.73 billion in the same period a year ago.

Profit came to $6.53 per share, and would have been $9.03 if not for accounting costs from employee stock compensation and restructuring charges related to Google's acquisition of Motorola Mobility, a cellphone maker.

Still, analysts polled by FactSet, a provider of financial data, were expecting $10.63 per share.

Besides disappointing investors, the report was an embarrassment for Google. Near the top of the draft, the report said, “PENDING LARRY QUOTE,” apparently a place to insert a quote from Larry Page, one of Google's founders.

The earnings report said that Google made about 15 percent less than a year earlier each time a user clicks on an online ad. That is the fourth straight quarter of erosion in Google's ad prices.

Google is the third-largest component in the Nasdaq composite, behind Apple and Microsoft. The Nasdaq finished down 31.25 points at 3,072.87.

The broader market fared better: The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 8.06 points, or 0.06 percent, at 13,549.94. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 3.57 points, or 0.2 percent, to 1,457.34.

The broader market is “waiting for a clear catalyst,” said Quincy Krosby, market strategist at Prudential Financial. What investors most want, she said, is a sense of direction about earnings and the economy.

Adolescent tantrums are cry out for control

Dear Amy: My girlfriend and I have been together for five months. She has a 9-year-old daughter who is very bright and very jealous of me because now her mother has two people in her life.

The child has not lived with anyone but her mother since her parents divorced when she was a baby. She has frequent temper tantrums that make me uncomfortable.

I raised a boy and a girl, and I never experienced that type of behavior because it was unacceptable in my house. Sometimes this child is affectionate toward me and sometimes standoffish.

AMY DICKINSON

Her mother and I are expecting a baby. Her daughter is excited about this because she has always wanted a sibling. They are planning to move into my house, but my girlfriend is nervous that my relationship with her daughter might not go well — or get worse.

There will be no relationship with my girlfriend without her daughter. The daughter has been seeing a psychologist to help her with her mixed emotions. What can I do to win this child's confidence so there is peace in the house?

— Want it to Work

Dear Want: Your children might not have had tantrums because their home life was stable, whereas this child's (suddenly) is not.

I suggest you try to see her world from her point of view. In less than six months, her mother has found a new partner, told her she is going to have a sibling and has hit her with a move. Any one of these stressors could throw off a stable and happy child; add the onset of adolescence into the mix and it's no wonder she is periodically exploding.

Nine is a challenging age, and while I agree that this child is old to have tantrums, she will continue to act out until she sees that another kind of behavior yields better and more positive results.

Her loss of control is a cry out for control. You should not discipline her or express your disapproval to her (let her mother take the lead). Reassure her calmly and encourage her to talk — even if what she says is hard for you to hear.

Regular, predictable routines, plenty of sleep, exercise and good nutrition will help too.

Visit the girl's counselor with her mother. Ask for recommendations and follow them.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Oct. 19). The year brings a rebirth of your intellectual life, and you'll be drawn to new interests, teachers and art forms. You'll reap personal benefits from institutions and political and economic trends. A controlling force of the past will be eliminated in December. Loved ones celebrate a May accomplishment. Leo and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 45, 43, 1, 23 and 15.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). You may find yourself in a constant state of management, with an endless to-do list that absorbs your time. Could you reassign some of your tasks to someone else? Delegation equals freedom.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Cool down and relax. There is nothing to be gained from rushing around. Besides, you look more confident and in control when you move slowly. The world will wait for you.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You'll be inexplicably drawn to an odd adventure. This road may seem potentially unpleasant and downright difficult, but no matter. It's the kind of thing you do just so you never have to do it again.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You're an excellent driver, so try to steer the action where you want it to go. The same goes for conversation. Otherwise, you'll tune out and get lost in your own thoughts, alienating the speaker.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). Status matters. The perceived authority of the people involved in a deal will affect how it goes down today. Whether in business or your personal life, do all you can to build your good name.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Trying to do a task perfectly robs you of the wonderful floating feeling of engagement in the same way that watching the clock prevents you from enjoying the moments.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're an expert politician, partly because you realize that politics doesn't only pertain to large organizations. Politics is alive in every transaction between human beings. You'll play the game well today.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It takes maturity to understand that much that happens in a day depends on what a person did the night before. Every action sets up the next action. Tonight's agenda changes as you use this principle as your guide.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There's much to be gained in the process of leaving. When you say goodbye to a situation, you are also saying goodbye to the person you were inside that situation.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll have an opportunity to publicize your cause, make your request widely known or send a message to more people than you've ever been able to reach before.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Sometimes all it takes is a little push to send you flying. This is usually true when you've already tested your wings and have them fully extended, just waiting for someone to dare you.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). You are not a contrarian. For you to play devil's advocate, or to adopt any conflicting point of view, you have to have an excellent reason — for instance, it's really what you believe.

Ketchup packets can be used to clean brass

Dear Heloise: I read your column in The (Colorado Springs, Colo.) Gazette. I used your recipe for cleaning silver for the first time, and it was simply amazing.

Do you have a recipe for cleaning brass?

— Anna F., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Dear Anna: I do, and it's as simple as grabbing the ketchup out of your refrigerator or using the little packets we seem to accumulate! You need to know whether the brass is lacquered or nonlacquered, because only nonlacquered brass can be cleaned using ketchup. Rub the ketchup on the item's surface, then remove with a clean, damp cloth. When done, buff dry.

HELOISE
COLUMNIST

Use only a damp, soft cloth without cleaner or polish on lacquered brass. Anything more can cause damage.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: I glued heavy-duty aluminum foil to the inside of plastic lids from margarine tubs, etc. Then I punched two holes in each lid and wired them to fence posts on my long, dark driveway to act as reflectors.

— Pam in Arizona

We cannot predict end of world

Dear Dr. Graham: I'm sure you've been asked this before, but do you think we're approaching the end of the world?

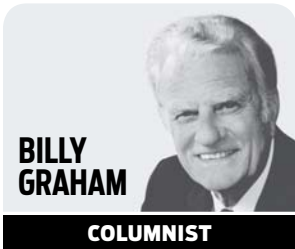

I've heard, for example, about that ancient Mayan calendar that predicts the world is going to end soon, and I wonder if it might be true.

— Mrs. V.B.

Dear Mrs. V.B.: From time to time, it seems, someone will come up with a new theory or "discovery" that supposedly predicts exactly when the world is going to end.

But those predictions have all been wrong — and there's no reason to believe this one will be any different. Scholars aren't even agreed on what that ancient calendar actually says.

Are we, however, nearing the time when Jesus will come again and the world as we know it will come to an end?

Jesus warned us against trying to predict exactly when He would return. He said, "No one knows about that day or hour, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father" (Matthew 24:36).

Instead, He said we need to be ready for His coming, for it could happen at any time.

About 10 percent of

did say that a number of events must first happen before He returns — and many of these have already taken place.

I often think, for example, of His statement that the Gospel would be preached to the whole world before He comes again — and more than ever, that is happening (see Matthew 24:14).

The real question, however, is this: Are you prepared for that day? To put it another way, if you somehow knew beyond doubt that the world would come to an end tomorrow, what difference would it make in your life?

Make sure of your commitment to Christ, and then make it your goal to live for Him every day of your life.

Gallstones may be causing pancreatitis if alcohol isn't an issue

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I'm recovering from pancreatitis. No one can give me an explanation of how I got it. Let me answer one question right now: No, I don't drink alcohol.

Everyone else has asked me, so I figured I'd give you the answer right off. What might have been the cause?

— R.I.

Dear R.I.: The pancreas has two functions. One, it makes insulin to control blood sugar. Two, it produces enzymes that digest food. The enzymes reduce food to a state where it can be absorbed.

As with all "itis" words, pancreatitis is an inflammation of the gland. The two most common causes of this inflammation are excessive alcohol and gallstones. I get the message — we can eliminate alcohol. Gallstones are still a candidate cause.

The pancreas and gallbladder share a drainage duct into the small intestine.

A gallstone can migrate from the gallbladder down to the common duct and block it. The pancreas's digestive juices cannot leave the gland. They begin to digest it — pancreatitis.

Other causes are possible. One is an extremely high level of blood triglycerides, a form of fat. Viruses are another cause. Mumps, chickenpox, coxsackie (a widely distributed virus responsible for intestinal problems) and the hepatitis B virus target the pancreas. And finally, there's idiopathic pancreatitis — inflammation for which no cause is found.

Acute pancreatitis gives rise to severe, upper-abdominal pain that often bores into the back. Nausea and vomiting are common. The pain doesn't come and go. It's steady and can last for days to a week.

Treatment is resting the gland by not stimulating it with eating. Nourishment is provided through intravenous feeding. Pain medication is essential. One of the complications of pancreatitis is infection of the gland. That's the reason why some doctors prescribe antibiotic therapy from the start.

About 10 percent of acute pancreatitis patients go on to have a chronic inflammation of the gland. Looked at with more upbeat statistics, 90 percent of patients are completely well after the acute condition has been controlled.

Farming

Despite tough year, don't make planting changes without good info

The year's harvest can be seen at the end of the tunnel. I know for many, plans for 2013 are underway or will be shortly.

When you have a major disruption in farm profitability, it works on a person's mind to get as much back as quickly as possible.

This year may have caused a lot of people to question a lot of things including plant populations, planting depths, maturity groups, and maybe even rotations.

Some have said, "I should have planted all beans." The last several years we have seen changes in all these questions. We have to remember though that all changes should be backed up with the best information we can get.

MIKE SMITH

Let's take a few minutes and look at crop rotations. The practice of crop rotation has been used for centuries and is proven to increase crop yields.

When looking at corn yields this year and how soybeans adjusted, you might lean toward soybeans. However, when you look at the profitability of corn, in some years you might lean toward it due to price.

Research done in the 1970s indicated that despite all the adjustments to input and management, corn yields were higher when the crop is rotated with some other crop than when grown continually.

On average, corn and soybean yields increased by 10 percent when rotated compared to when any one crop is grown back to back. This will differ somewhat from field to field, but generally holds true.

Some research has shown up to a 19 percent increase when rotating on corn. Science has not fully explained the rotation effect, but farmers still take advantage of it. Crop rotation is but one decision of many that producers make every year.

Another question I get asked is "How much fertilizer do you think I used? My corn didn't yield much."

I know that has been a difficult year in a lot of ways, but not losing track of how we got to where we are and using good information will allow us to make the best decisions.

Squirrel population boom frustrates fruit growers, homeowners

By Wilson Ring
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Don't let the bright eyes and bushy tails fool you. These squirrels are up to no good.

Last year's mild winter and a bumper crop of nuts have caused an apparent explosion in the squirrel population in patches of the country, bewildering fruit growers with their ravenous appetites, littering highway shoulders as roadkill, and keeping homeowners and pest control experts busy.

In southern Vermont, Clarence Boston said he hasn't seen such an infestation of pests in the 33 years he has been an orchardist on 60 farms in five states.

The squirrels wait until his apple crop is nearly ripe to swarm into the trees from nearby forests, sometimes eating half a tree's fruit in two or three hours. Sometimes, the squirrels will take only one bite, but the teeth marks make the apples worthless for retail sale.

"It's leaving me reeling. I'm sort of used to getting kicked around; I'm a farmer," said Boston, who estimates squirrels destroyed about half of his most profitable variety of apples following a season already made tough by the weather. "I was not expecting the next plague to be red squirrels."

Biologists know squirrel populations have rare but periodic "eruptions," when conditions coincide to produce abundant foods that fuel the fast-reproducing animals. This year's squirrel boom in parts of Vermont followed two seasons of bountiful acorn and beechnut crops and last year's mild winter.

In addition to eating up cash crops, squirrels can also prevent future harvests by "girdling" trees — eating away a band of bark around the trunk, causing it to die.

At South Carolina's Clemson University, gray squirrels have been so abundant in the past several years that they have killed more than 100 mature trees, said Greg Yarrow, chairman of the school's division of natural resources.

The school has experimented with non-lethal squirrel-control methods, including capturing and then injecting them with birth control chemicals. Another, less labor-intensive method has involves leaving chemical-laced bait that inhibits reproduction.

Experts noting an increase in squirrel populations include Paul Curtis, an associate professor at Cornell University's Department of Natural Resources and a pest management expert. Such eruptions are rare but noted in historical literature, he said. "This is the first one I've heard of," Curtis said. "I've been here in New York state for 20 years."

Trying to get a precise measurement of the scope of the infestation is difficult. The population booms appear to be happening in some places, but not others.

Curtis said he has heard of problems in New York's Hudson Valley, north of New York City, but not in western New York. Similar booms have been reported in New Mexico, and squirrel hunters in Indiana and Ohio are expecting banner seasons. But hunters in Pennsylvania are being told it could be a tough season.

In Vermont, at least, the plague is expected to end this winter. After two good nut seasons, this year saw poor acorn and beechnut crops. That could be contributing to high activity as many squirrels look for food elsewhere, Hammond said.

For farmers, the beginning of the end is of little consolation in the here and now.

Before this year, John Barber

A red squirrel perches on a tree branch in Calais, Vt. Biologists say a variety of natural forces have combined to produce an overabundance of squirrels throughout Vermont and some adjoining states, devastating at least some apple orchards.

never had a problem with squirrels at his 25-acre Apple Hill Orchard in Whitehall, N.Y. Now the animals are building nests in his trees and sampling different varieties of apples as the fruit matures, staying one step ahead of his pickers.

He estimates, conservatively, that he is going to lose 15 to 20 percent of his crop.

"Usually your best fruit is the fruit that's fully exposed to the sun; it gets the best color to it," Barber said. "Your size is usually out on the upper canopy of the tree. That's what they're doing; they're climbing up into the upper canopy."

Farmers aren't the only ones reporting problems.

Drivers are dodging squirrels that dart across roads or skirting ones that are killed while crossing. Hammond said he has seen carcasses on roadsides from Vermont to Connecticut.

Petty metal thieves costing farmers thousands

The Associated Press

DOS PALOS, Calif. — Cannon Michael is a folk hero across California's agriculture heartland, where these days the price of scrap metal influences a farmer's bottom line as much that of the fine pima cotton he grows.

When thieves tore up yet another pricey water pump for the few dollars' worth of copper wire that energize it, the frustrated farmer considered taping $100 bills to the rebuilt system hoping crooks would just grab the easy money next time.

After a little more thought he warned his neighbors — and set a trap.

Within two months the screech of bare rims on asphalt alerted everyone within earshot that the 6-inch tire spikes Michael buried near his besieged pumps had thwarted the thieves' getaway.

"I have to protect my property," said Michael, whose thoughtful demeanor is not one of a vigilante. "Law enforcement isn't helping, but you can't expect them to be out in the middle of nowhere. At some point you have to make the thieves not want to come out here."

California farmers are facing a calamity. Petty metal thefts, which law enforcement officials believe are driven by Central California's high rate of methamphetamine addiction, are creating damages 10 times higher than the value of the metal crooks rip out to recycle.

In the nation's No. 1 agriculture county, thieves are on track this year to steal more than $1 million worth of metal they'll sell for pennies on the dollar.

The theft of pump wiring, irrigation pipes, equipment bearings and even tractor weights account for 85 percent of Fresno County's rural crime, the district attorney said.

"That's just in metal loss," said Sgt. Mike Chapman of the Fresno County Sheriff's Office Agriculture Task Force. "That's not what it's going to cost to replace or repair the equipment, which can be 10 times more."

That's what makes metal thefts worse for farmers than thefts of crops or, five years ago when prices skyrocketed, diesel fuel.

The Urban Institute, a Washington DC research organization, estimated after studying crime in California's Central Valley that agriculture theft of all types cost farmers nationwide $5 billion in 2007, most passed along to consumers as higher prices.

As sheriffs' budgets shrink, often four or fewer deputies patrol up to 2,400 square miles a night. In Central California, where 31,000 farms span 22,600 square miles, potential witnesses are scarce and thieves work with impunity. The state attorney general reported in 2006 that of 119,297 thefts in this 10-county agricultural region, just 7,854 arrests were made.

Law enforcement officials lament the lack of deterrents, since jails are full, and the court system is concentrating on violent offenders.

"Metal thieves can be back on the streets by the end of the day," Chapman said.

Police: Woman burned own home over attic noises
CARLSBAD, N.M. — Authorities say a Carlsbad woman burned down her own house after claiming to hear noises in the attic.
The Carlsbad Current-Argus reports that 33-year-old Valerie Hernandez was arrested last week after a nearly six-month investigation.
Hernandez admitted buying lighter fluid but told police she just dropped the lighter fluid by the front door.
Police say she repeatedly asked authorities if the person in the attic had died during the fire.
No one was hurt in the blaze.
Police say fire originated on a mattress.

Woman reports giving birth on Philly subway train
PHILADELPHIA — It was a very unusual delivery on a Philadelphia subway line.
Police say a woman riding the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority's Broad Street line told officers she gave birth aboard a northbound train Tuesday afternoon.
KYW-TV reports transit police Officer Loyd Rodgers and his partner gave the stork a helping hand after the woman approached them at the Olney station. Nestled in her clothing was her baby boy, umbilical cord still attached.
Rodgers wrapped the newborn in a blanket and called for medics.

Shotgun wedding? Jeweler offers long guns with rings
NORTH LIBERTY, Iowa — Have you spent your life hunting for the perfect wife? Maybe you have met the one but are feeling gun shy?
An Iowa jeweler is offering free rifles for husbands-to-be who spend at least $1,999 on an engagement ring at his store near Iowa City.
Jeweler Harold van Beek told KCRG near Cedar Rapids that he wanted to "do something for the boy who doesn't like to hunt for diamonds but likes to hunt for deer."
The deal at Jewelry By Harold in North Liberty started Thursday and will run through the end of October.
The rifle offer is subject to Iowa laws on gun ownership.

THANK YOU FOR SUPPORTING THE GLEANER NIE PROGRAM!

LEAF BAG PICK UP LOCATION HAS CHANGED!

Bags will be available for pick up at:
Old Buy Low Parking Lot
Gardenside Shopping Center
2606 Zion Road
Saturday, October 20th and
Monday – Friday, October 22 – 26
From 8:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.
(WHILE SUPPLIES LAST)

LEAF SEASON IS HERE AND WE NEED YOUR HELP.

Each year the leaves that are placed in the street and gutter wash into the combined sewer system. This clogs the street stormwater intakes and can cause the streets to flood. The leaves eventually find their way through the sewer system to the wastewater treatment plant and can cause many operational problems. In some instances, the leaves can cause raw sewage to back up into the street, or result in the bypass of raw wastewater to the Ohio River. You can help us prevent these problems.

The Henderson Water Utility will provide 15 leaf bags free, while supplies last, to each household (within the city limits only) for bagging leaves. Bagging the leaves will keep the wind from blowing them from your yard. This will help ensure the leaves do not reach the combined wastewater and stormwater system. While the bags we provide may not be enough to bag all of your leaves, we do hope that you find them helpful.

Once you have bagged the leaves, place the bags near the curb. You must then call Public Works at 831-1224 and they will pick up the bags.

PLEASE HELP US KEEP THE LEAVES OUT OF THE STREET AND GUTTERS AND PREVENT THEM FROM BACKING UP THE COMBINED WASTEWATER AND STORMWATER SYSTEM.

Thank you for your help in this important project.

Journeyman Pressman

The Henderson Gleaner, a business unit of Evansville Courier Company, has an opportunity for a reliable, experienced, quality- and safety-conscious pressman.

Our pressmen have earned national and international recognition in newspaper print quality competitions and they take a great deal of pride in the work they do.

We work four evenings per week printing weekly newspapers and print advertising products.

This full-time opportunity offers a good starting wage and employee benefits package to include medical, dental, 401(k), liberal vacations and more. Newspaper press experience is a plus, but not required.

You may find a complete description of the duties and responsibilities associated with this job and apply online at jobs.courierpress.com. Search for requisition #5372.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Friday, Oct. 19, the 293rd day of 2012. There are 73 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 19, 1987, the stock market crashed as the Dow Jones Industrial Average plunged 508 points, or 22.6 percent in value, to close at 1,738.74.

On this date:

In 1812, French forces under Napoleon Bonaparte began their retreat from Moscow.

In 1951, President Harry S. Truman signed an act formally ending the state of war with Germany.

In 1967, the U.S. space probe Mariner 5 flew past Venus.

In 1977, the supersonic Concorde made its first landing in New York City.

In 1982, automaker John Z. DeLorean was arrested by federal agents in Los Angeles, accused of conspiring to sell $24 million of cocaine to salvage his business. (DeLorean was acquitted at trial on grounds of entrapment.)

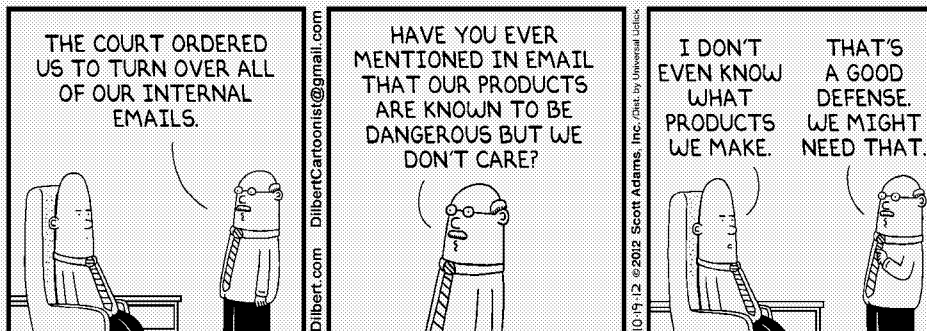

Ten years ago: The San Francisco Giants defeated the Anaheim Angels 4-3 in Game 1 of the World Series.

One year ago: Authorities in the Zanesville, Ohio, area wound down their hunt for wild animals unleashed by a private farm owner who'd taken his own life; sheriff's deputies shot and killed a total of 48 animals. In Greece, hundreds of youths smashed and looted stores in central Athens and clashed with riot police during a massive anti-government rally against painful new austerity measures. The St. Louis Cardinals won Game 1 of the World Series, defeating the Texas Rangers 3-2.

Think about it

"To become aware of the possibility of the search is to be onto something."
— Walker Percy, American author (1916-1990).

BEST BETS

7 p.m. on 19
America's Next Top Model
The more, the merrier is the name of the game for the girls in this new episode, as they embark on "go-sees" with various designers. Each designer can only choose one of them for a modeling job, but they can accept more than one offer. The one who books the most jobs wins the challenge. After a photo shoot with a 1950s bad-girl theme, Tyra reveals that a previously eliminated contestant is rejoining the competition in "The Girl Who Comes Back."

Race 2012
This new documentary uses the current presidential election as a lens through which to view America's racial landscape. It delves into immigrants' reshaping of the American electoral picture, white voters' reaction to their declining numbers and diminished influence, and the economic imbalance between races that may affect America's political future.

8 p.m. on 14
Grimm
Sports aren't the only extracurriculars that can be hazardous to kids' safety, as Nick and Hank (David Giuntoli, Russell Hornsby) discover when they investigate the murder of a high-schooler who was an academic decathlete. Renard (Sasha Roiz) deals with some unwanted attention and the news that an old accomplice has reconnected with his relatives in Europe. Monroe (Silas Weir Mitchell) gets a surprise at the spice shop in the new episode "The Other Side."

8 p.m. on 44
CSI: NY
Songs by Green Day provide the narration for dialogue-free action sequences in this new episode, in which Mac (Gary Sinise) and the team race to catch the person who tried to shoot a political candidate (Neal McDonough, "Desperate Housewives") — an attempt that left Lindsay (Anna Belknap) injured. Sela Ward, Carmine Giovinazzo and Hill Harper also star in "Unspoken."

8 p.m. on 19
Nikita
As Season 3 opens, Ryan and Nikita (Noah Bean, Maggie Q) take charge of Division and make it their first mission to bring in the rogue agents who failed to respond to the recall after Percy's death. Things don't go as planned, and Michael (Shane West) is arrested. Nikita formulates an escape plan for him that involves Alex (Lyndsy Fonseca) reprising the role of Russian princess Alexandra Udinov in the appropriately titled season premiere, "3.0."

8 p.m. on 2
Boss
With his mental faculties at a new low, Kane (Kelsey Grammer) faces a double threat, as Sam Miller (Troy Garity) prepares to break a story that could destroy him, and Kitty (Kathleen Robertson) must decide whether her loyalties lie with him or Doyle (John Hoogenakker). With his back against the wall, he considers making a big revelation in the new episode "True Enough."

Blue Bloods
Daanny and Jackie (Donnie Wahlberg, Jennifer Esposito) investigate when a bride is murdered in a drive-by shooting on her wedding day, but they're pulled off the case to help protect a visiting Central American president, much to their dismay. Jamie (Will Estes) questions his partner's (Sebastian Sozzi) methods after the latter performs an unjustified stop in the new episode "Scorched Earth." Tom Selleck also stars.

9 p.m. on 9
VOCES on PBS
The inspiring documentary "Lemon" tells the story of Andrew "Lemon" Andersen, a poet and playwright of Puerto Rican descent who discovered poetry behind bars and won a place in "Russell Simmons Def Poetry Jam" on Broadway. When the show closed, Andersen found himself back in the projects. The film follows him over three years as he creates a play based on his life and brings it to the stage.

9 p.m. on A
The Walking Dead
The smash zombie drama returns for Season 3, in which the survivors learn that there might be more to fear from the living than the dead. The series introduces two new characters to the mix — the sword-wielding Michonne (Danai Gurira) and the maniacal tyrant The Governor (David Morrissey). Oh, and Merle (Michael Rooker) is back.

9 p.m. on 1
My Life Is a Lifetime Movie
If you've ever read a news story and said to yourself, "That sounds like a Lifetime movie," this is the show for you. Recognizing the cultural impact of its movies on America for nearly three decades, Lifetime introduces this unscripted series, which recounts gripping real-life stories as told by the women who actually lived them.

9 p.m. on 10
Hunted
A female Jason Bourne-type character, less the amnesia, is the heroine of this new action series. It follows the brilliant, beautiful and ruthless Sam Hunter (Melissa George) on a mission to find out who wants her dead. In the world of international espionage, Hunter is a covert operative who goes off the grid after an attempt on her life. She returns to work a year later and begins a hunt for the truth that leads her into a complex mystery.
